Feng Yu-hsiang Evicts 'Boy Emperor'; Takes Over Imperial City

MANCHUS ARE FORCED OUT OF PALACE BY MILITARY

Action Is Based On Agreement Made On Abdication

TAKE INVENTORY

Imperial Treasures To Be Claimed By Republic

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 5.—General Feng Yu-hsiang this morning sent military and police chiefs to the Palace, where they met and informed the Manchurian Chamberlain that the Government wanted to take over the whole of the Imperial City, in accordance with the proviso contained in the agreement between the Republic and the Manchurian House at the time of abdication, but hitherto not enforced.

Discussions ensued, the Republican representatives explaining that it would be necessary to take an inventory in order to determine the respective belongings of the State and the Manchu House as regards archives, treasures, etc.

Meanwhile, the Palace was guarded and all ingress and egress stopped.

This afternoon the ex-Emperor Hsuan-Tung accompanied by the whole of the Manchu family left the Imperial Palace and took up residence in the Palace of his father Prince Chun, the ex-Regent, situated in the North-Western part of the City, near the famous Coal Hill.

A number of officers of the Household are remaining in order to assist in taking the inventory. The evacuation and preceding arrangements were carried out so quietly that few people in the city yet knew what has happened.

Japan Commercial Attache May Be Succeeded Here By New Trade Commissioner

Local Office, Y. Yokotake In Charge, To Be Closed March 1 Under Official Instructions From Foreign Office At Tokio

The office of Japanese commercial attache in Shanghai is to be abolished March 1, 1925 under present plans of financial readjustment of the Japanese government.

However, according to advices to Shanghai yesterday, trade commissioners may be stationed at the important trade ports to take the place of the commercial attaches.

The trade commissioners would be maintained by the department of agriculture and commerce while the attaches are maintained by foreign office.

Mr. J. Yokotake, commercial attache in Shanghai has received instructions to close the local office March 1 but has received no official information of the new plan.

Commercial attaches are stationed at present in Shanghai, Singapore, New York, London and Buenos Aires.

It is not known whether Mr. Yokotake will remain here under the new plan.

This problem has an important bearing upon the proposed readjustment of the Export Trade Union in Japan as measures for develop-

Transport Vessels All Sail Southward From Tangku

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, Nov. 5.—An eyewitness says that Marshal Wu Pei-fu was still at Tangku at 6.30 on the evening of November 3. This is the last authentic report regarding the Marshal's whereabouts.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 4.—All the transport vessels at Tangku sailed away from that port during the night. According to the crews, they were ordered to proceed to Tsingtao where, it is inferred, Marshal Wu Pei-fu will land to confer with Mr. Kao Hsiung, Director of Tsingtao Port Affairs, and Mr. Hsiung Ping-chi, Civil Governor of Shantung.

It is also observed that in case Marshal Wu does not land at Tsingtao, he will possibly go to Hsichow, Kiangsu.

Hankow, Nov. 5.—The Central China Post states that Marshal Tuan Chi-jui has accepted the seals of the Presidency and that the seals of the Inspectorship of Chihli, Honan and Shantung have been offered to Marshal Chang Tso-lin.

The same paper also reports that the final debacle of Marshal Wu Pei-fu was caused by General Wang Chen-ping and Wang Hsiang-ching going over to General Feng. It states that the Marshal's whereabouts and intentions are unknown, but it is believed that he is coming to Hankow at the head of a cruiser.

4TH DIVISION REVOLTS; HEAD IS REFUGEE IN SHANGHAI

Hsia Chao-ling, Who Double-crossed Chen, Flees

KIANGSU BONDS

Shanghai's Quota For Rehabilitation Is Two Million

Hsia Chao-ling, new commander of the fourth division who double-crossed his chief, Chen Yao-shan, causing the collapse of the Chekiang army on October 13, is now a refugee in Shanghai, following the mutiny of his troops in Kashi on Tuesday.

Upon the ousting of Chen Yao-shan, Hsia surrendered with his forces to Fukien, and marched, after being re-enlisted by Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, to Kashi. The lack of military expenses has been causing a great deal of dissatisfaction among the troops and matters came to a head last week when definite demands were made by the forces on Hsia to look after their welfare. Failure to accommodate resulted in grave disquiet on Monday when a threat to take Hsia's life was made by the soldiery. Consequently, Hsia fled to Shanghai, it was learned yesterday.

Rumors have it that the division is being taken over by a certain military leader in Shanghai, whose political affiliation is at present not clear.

General Chang Yung-ming, the Hupei commander, is still in Shanghai with his entire fifth mixed brigade. The four steamers chartered for his use, were still anchored yesterday at Kaohsiang.

Dr. Sze Raises Protest On Internal Interference In Opium Parley Debate

China Ready To Co-operate In Measures For Suppression Of Smoking But Demands To Know What Measures Other States Intend To Adopt

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, November 4.—Rather a lively debate took place today at the Opium Conference when it was discussing rules of procedure. Dr. Sze, China, wanted to know what measures other states intended to adopt before he could suggest the measures of his own government. He declared that he strongly objected to interference with the internal affairs of China.

M. Van Wietum, who was presiding, interposed by saying that there was no intention of interfering with China's sovereignty.

Dr. Sze further objected to being admitted to committees in an advisory capacity only and regretted that he was unable to give a blank cheque to other Powers to decide what measures should be applied to China.

Sir J. Campbell, India, said that if the present conference was delayed by procedure as suggested by the Chinese the latter would have to assume responsibility.

Dr. Sze afterwards emphasized that China would readily co-operate in measures for the suppression of opium-smoking. He hoped that other States would act in a similar manner.

Mr. Kaku, Japan, made a statement showing that the Japanese were showing progress in the

DAVIS SMOTHERED UNDER REPUBLICAN AVALANCHE; LA FOLLETTE POOR THIRD

Smith Beats Roosevelt In Hard Battle For New York Governorship; 'Ma' Ferguson Wins In Texas Gubernatorial Race; 'Solid South' Trembles On Verge Of Republicanism

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, November 5.—Though the ballots for all the states have not yet been counted, there is every likelihood that President Coolidge and Mr. Dawes will have over 300 of the 531 votes of the Electoral College.

'Ma' Ferguson has been victorious in the Governorship of Texas. Mr. Smith won New York.

Up to the present the Republicans have secured a net gain of six seats in the House of Representatives.

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, November 5.—According to ballot results up to 3:50 this morning President Coolidge apparently commanded a lead in twenty states with a total of 270 Electoral votes, and was ahead in thirteen other states having 88 Electoral votes. Failing a set-back in belated returns, he will receive a substantial majority over Mr. Davis, who up to the present is assured 136 Electoral votes, and 13 for Senator La Follette.

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, November 5.—Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, will continue as chief executive of the American nation for at least another four years.

Results from widely scattered sections have rendered indisputable the triumph registered at the polls yesterday by the President and his running-mate, Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes. Although the extent of the landslide which assures the Republican party another four years' tenure at Washington cannot be accurately gauged as yet, there is every indication that the Republicans, despite the Progressive third party movement, have held fast all nominally Republican territory and made serious inroads in the camps of the opposition. Even some sections of the Democratic "Solid South" are trembling on the verge of Republicanism.

On the basis of returns available this morning, John W. Davis, former American ambassador to Great Britain and Democratic presidential nominee, will be a weak second to the President, and Robert M. La Follette, the insurgent Senator from Wisconsin, a poor third. The Republican ticket is leading in the home states of both Davis and La Follette. Davis' strength is confined almost entirely to the Democratic South, while the only state in which La Follette is leading is North Dakota.

First returns compiled at Republican political headquarters here showed that Coolidge was making a clean sweep in the East and North Central States. In the state of New York, whose 45 votes in the electoral college are a factor of tremendous significance in national elections, the President was leading Davis by 500,000 votes.

(Reuter's American Service)

The first returns in New York State showed: Coolidge 484,000; Davis, 261,000.

President Coolidge is leading ten to one in Massachusetts, four to one in Kansas, three to one in Illinois and two to one in Ohio.

One of the most surprising political upsets was recorded in Oklahoma, where a Republican Senator is leading three to one in this nominally Democratic state.

Coolidge has a slight lead in West Virginia, Ambassador Davis' home state.

Davis carried the city of Baltimore by three thousand, but it is possible that he will be unable to retain leadership when returns from the remainder of the state of Maryland come in.

MACDONALD AND CABINET HOLD FINAL MEETING

Baldwin Summoned By Throne, Accepts Task Of Forming New Government

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 4.—A crowd, which was apparently largely composed of Labor sympathisers, cheered the Ministers as they arrived to attend the last meeting of the Labor Cabinet.

The meeting lasted an hour and three-quarters. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who was the last to leave, stood bare-headed posing for his photograph, smoking a cigarette. He motored to Buckingham Palace at 5.30 p.m. and tendered his resignation.

Mr. Baldwin returned to town in the afternoon and was afterwards summoned by the King. He saw His Majesty and accepted the task of forming a government.

Leads Upstate In New York

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Nov. 4.—While official figures are not yet available President Coolidge seems certain of re-election by a sweeping majority.

Both the New York World and the New York Times had conceded victory to President Coolidge by 10 p.m. though the returns were still very incomplete, especially from the Western States.

It is noteworthy from the later returns that even the historically Democratic South is showing scattered signs of Republican tendencies.

Though Mr. Roosevelt has a large majority outside the city of New York all the indications are that this will be overcome by the enormous vote that Mr. Smith is receiving in New York City.

Coolidge Leads In Early Returns

(Reuter's American Service)
New York, Nov. 4.—The first returns from such widely scattered points as Massachusetts, Illinois and Kansas show large gains in favor of President Coolidge.

Expects Republican Majority In House

(Reuter's American Service)
Washington, Nov. 4.—It is stated at the White House that President Coolidge expects at least 250 votes in the electoral college and a Republican working majority of 20 or more in the House of Representatives next session.

'Ma' Ferguson Leads For Governorship

(Reuter's American Service)
New York, Nov. 4.—President Coolidge is leading in West Virginia from ex-Ambassador Davis and in Wisconsin he is slightly ahead of Senator La Follette. In Massachusetts President Coolidge is leading ex-Ambassador Davis by seven to one.

Mr. Roosevelt is running well ahead of Mr. Smith for the governorship of New York.

'Ma' Ferguson is well ahead in the Texas polling for the Governorship of that state.

Election Announced By Chicago Paper

Roosevelt Will Lose By 100,000

(Special Cable to THE CHINA PRESS)
(Special to THE C. P.)
New York, Nov. 5.—The New York Times and the New York World, which supported former Ambassador Davis in his campaign for the Presidency, have conceded the election of President Coolidge.

On the basis of available returns, it is prophesied that Theodore Roosevelt, son of the former President, will be defeated by a margin of 100,000 votes by Governor Al Smith in the fight for the governorship of New York.

The President's lead over former Ambassador Davis is increasing throughout the nation.

California has given Coolidge double the combined vote of Davis and Senator Robert M. La Follette, Progressive insurgent.

Wisconsin and West Virginia, the home states of the President's two opponents, are both in the Coolidge column.

Roosevelt Gains In Smith Territory

(Special Cable to THE CHINA PRESS)
New York, November 5.—In complete returns in the gubernatorial election show that 1159 precincts which were carried by Governor Al Smith two years ago have given Theodore Roosevelt, son of the late President, a majority of 75,000.

Davis Leads In Gotham

(Reuter's American Service)
New York, Nov. 4.—Six hundred election districts in New York State outside New York City show Mr. Coolidge to be leading with Mr. Davis second and Mr. La Follette a poor third, but returns from a hundred districts in New York City give Mr. Davis 20,632 votes, Mr. Coolidge 19,088 and Mr. La Follette 7,719, while the South is also mainly for Mr. Davis.

Returns from many points in the Eastern States except the South show Mr. Coolidge maintaining a consistent lead and indications of a Coolidge landslide are multiplying even so far west as Dakota.

Two-to-One In New York State

(Special Cable to THE CHINA PRESS)
New York, Nov. 5.—Early returns in the national elections give President Calvin Coolidge a sweeping lead in the entire Atlantic area.

The Republican Presidential ticket scored a two-to-one victory in New York State, excluding New York City, where the Republicans are leading by a small margin with forty precincts reported.

Indiana is giving the President a two-to-one lead over Davis, and returns from Illinois show that the Republicans are also carrying that state two-to-one.

Returns from Kentucky indicate that Davis has a small lead over Coolidge.

La Follette is a poor third in every section of the country.

Incomplete returns from New York State indicate that Theodore Roosevelt, son of the late President, will carry the state with a small plurality over Governor Al Smith, with whom he is contesting the governorship.

MANAGER OF SINWANPAO PASSES AWAY

Veteran Local Journalist Expires After 26 Years' Service

It is with feelings of the deepest regret that we have to record the death of Mr. Wang Han-chee, for 26 years General Manager of the "Sinwanpao." For some months past Mr. Wang Han-chee has been confined to bed and the hope was entertained by his many friends that he would

DEPRESSION IN SHIP INDUSTRY IS CONTINUING

Lloyd's Register Shows Low Record For New Tonnage

(Reuter's Service)
London, Nov. 5.—The report of Lloyd's Register of Shipping for the year which ended on June 30 last records a continuance of depression in the shipbuilding industry.

It says that the tonnage of new vessels classed by Lloyd's during the year, namely 885,000 tons, is the lowest recorded for fifteen years except for the second year of the war, and that it represents only twenty-seven percent of that for 1920-21 and fifty-five percent of the total for 1922-23.

Four hundred and fifty-four vessels of a tonnage of 600,000 were lost and 500 vessels with a tonnage of 1,250,000 dismantled or broken up—the last figure being twice that of the year which ended in June, 1923.

Although the world's mercantile fleet is still 15,000,000 tons greater than in 1914 a large proportion is laid up because which is not likely ever to be able successfully to seek employment, and any serious revival of overseas traffic will probably lead to a further elimination of uneconomical tonnage.

Tientsin, November 5.—The cavalry regiment under the command of General Wu Kuang-shin, acting in cooperation with part of the Second Fengtien Army, yesterday defeated the Chihli troops in the district of Lutai and last evening completely captured Tangku, where there is not a single Chihli soldier. Nine of the transport vessels which had left Tangku arrived in Tientsin with no troops aboard.

As to the destination of Marshal Wu, it is rumored here that the Huxia, with Marshal Wu aboard, escorted by three Chinese men-of-war, the Haihe, Chaohe, and Yunging, has sailed southward, perhaps in the direction of Nanking.

The Nankai Chamber of Commerce will meet tomorrow and the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce will meet on Saturday afternoon on the question of raising the funds for the loan.

Local merchants, it is learned, are vigorously opposed to the loan, in view of the damages they have already sustained directly and indirectly through the war, which they say, were waged between the militarists of Kiangsu and Chekiang on their responsibility.

The Fokien brigade under the command of General Meng Chao-yu, which was dispatched to Nanking on their way to reinforce Wu Pei-fu, suddenly returned to Shanghai on Tuesday and yesterday. JOHN W. DAVIS—

Democratic Candidate for President of the United States, strongly endorses life insurance. He says: "I think enough of life insurance myself to be able to say that I carry enough of it to care for such estate as I may leave—pay all the required taxes thereon—and independent of my other resources, care for those dependent upon me, in the event that I should be taken away. That is good sense, good business, common honesty. No man charged with responsibility for the welfare of others should leave them unprotected against the contingency of his death. The life insurance I carry I regard as the most certain and valuable part of my estate, and it is dedicated to a sacred purpose."

LOOTING STILL IS CARRIED ON NEAR SUNGKIANG

Soldiers Avenge Themselves On Villagers For Capture
Of Comrade

(Special Correspondence)
Sungkiang, Nov. 3.—Things are not settling down in this district. There are too many soldiers here. The authorities will manage in some way to diminish the number. There are at least five thousand soldiers here now and they do not appear to be under good control. For there are many rumors of looting in the outlying districts. The neighborhood just outside the south gate has suffered the most. The soldiers have been making themselves a nuisance out there until last Saturday the patience of the country people got the better of their judgment and they laid violent hands on a soldier and took him in custody.

It is not clear as to what his punishment was, but anyway his fellow soldiers undertook revenge by not only looting the place, but also by firing two of the houses. The house of the leading man of the place was practically wrecked. It was fired in two places, but only a small part was burned. The destruction was accomplished with sticks or clubs. Not a whole pane of glass was left anywhere. Mirrors were smashed, water jars crushed, kitchen ranges wrecked and the whole was about as thorough a piece of devastation as has ever been witnessed. A big fire was made of rice husks out in the front area and on this was cast about two or three hundred dollars worth of fire crackers and beautiful flower vases and tea-pots. These soldiers apparently are experienced in destruction. I could not have conceived of such a thorough piece of work being done.

There ought to be some kind of authority to prevent soldiers from carrying on so, but it looks as if their officers were afraid to bring them under discipline. There are some rumors that the lack of authority comes from the fact that the soldiers have not been given their pay in full. The magistrate has seemed willing and ready to help in keeping order, but he has a hard job trying to deal with so many soldiers with no money. We are glad of the extra train that has been given to us. We now have three trains a day both ways to and from Shanghai. The railway management is doing the best it can under the circumstances and is appreciated. Quite a number of the citizens have returned and things have taken on somewhat of a more normal look. However many are still afraid to return and fear that trouble still awaits them.

Chrysanthemum Show

A "Chrysanthemum Show" under the auspices of the Garden Department of the American Women's Club will be held in the Club Rooms at 66 Szechuen Road between 3 and 6 p.m. on Thursday, November 6, 1924. Competitions are being entered for:
1. The best specimen of Chrysanthemum plant.
2. The best single bloom of Chrysanthemum—supply your own vase.
3. For the best group of 2 standard plants.
4. For the best group of 2 bush plants.
5. The best 6 plants in variety.
6. The best 3 plants in variety.
7. The most artistically arranged bowl or basket of Chrysanthemums—flowers may be bought.

8. The most oddly grown plant of Chrysanthemum—plants may be borrowed for exhibit.
All exhibits must be in place by 11 a.m. Thursday morning, as judging will take place at 11:30. The entire club membership is invited to participate in these competitions. Mesdames MacGregor, Barnfoot and Hanson have been appointed as judges to award the prizes. The public will vote for the best bowl or basket display. The Social Department is taking advantage of this occasion to hold a reception for Dr. Anne Walter Ferns, President of the American Women's Club, who arrived from America on Tuesday. All members and friends desirous of meeting Dr. Ferns are cordially invited to attend. The reception will be held between 5 and 6 p.m. Dr. Ferns will present a lecture on "The Chrysanthemum" in the evening by the judges of the competition. The Music Department is contributing several musical numbers.

HANGCHOW STILL IS SILENT OVER COUP IN PEKING

Rumors Regarding Tuli Sun's Intentions Are Contradictory

(China Press Correspondence)
Hangchow, Nov. 1.—Yesterday the Emperor of Japan's birthday quite a number of officials visited the Consul to offer their congratulations. Both Military Governor Sun Chuan-fang and Civil Governor Hsiao Tsao were present. From the Military Governor's Yamen to the Consulate the road was literally lined with soldiers.

Hangchow is silent over the Peking coup d'état. Rumor has it that troops are going North and at the same time we are told that Sun is prepared to obey Tuan Chi-jui when he becomes Commander-in-Chief of the National Army.

The railway is at last booking passengers to Shanghai; train to Fong Kyin, then steam launch to Sungkiang and train again from there to Shanghai, taking some 8 hours for the journey. We suppose the same thing is being done from the Shanghai end but so far we have only got Thursday's reply to Saturday night.

The Educational Association has asked General Sun for funds to open the Government schools and he has, we are told, promised something to them, and plans are now being made to open some of the schools shortly.

The weather is glorious and the city is quiet although soldiers are very much in evidence everywhere. Today I met a hundred or so of them carrying fire wood on poles, and instead of one man carrying two bundles, two men were carrying two between them. Two men in one instance, put their two bundles into a rickshaw and walked alongside with the pole. Now labor saving process!

On Friday Dr. and Mrs. Main welcomed to tea a hundred or more members of the Christian Fellowship Association which was established by Bishop Moule, Rev. J. L. Stuart and others for closer Union work amongst Christian leaders, Chinese and foreign. Just 40 years ago. After tea Dr. Main, who was at the first meeting, gave a short history of the association and Mr. Oliver of the Y. M. C. A. who has just returned from his furlough in America told of some of the chief problems the church was up against in America and made comparisons with what the church in China has at present to deal with.

At the end of the meeting the members were conducted in groups around the new Medical School, which they very much enjoyed.

CANTON'S SALT REVENUE TOTAL IS CUT IN HALF

Shrinkage Due To Disturbed
Conditions And Seizure
By Mercenaries

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Canton, November 1.—The local disturbances have much reduced the salt revenue receipts collected in Canton and the annual income from this source has shrunk from a previous maximum of $3,000,000 to less than $4,000,000.

According to the latest figures available the returns for April were $225,240, for May $325,850, June $491,250, July $342,825, August $214,650 and September $319,175. The causes of this shrinkage are said to be the general business strike and the seizure of the proceeds of the tax in some districts by the generals of the mercenary troops. It is alleged that the salt commissioner has been compelled to make allowances to several military organizations and was in arrears to these commanders for $255,410 up to the end of September. To avoid embarrassment, the commissioner is reported to be forcing the salt merchants to pay their taxes in advance.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Canton, November 1.—It is reported that the Yunnanese mercenary troops have offered to withdraw from Canton and it is believed that they may shortly leave the city.

The annual Imperial Chrysanthemum party probably will be held at the Akasaka Palace, Tokio, on November 20. Approximately 5,000 prominent Japanese and foreigners are expected to be invited. It was thought improbable that the chrysanthemum party would be held this year so close after the earthquake, and no preparations have been made for it. The Empress, however, has ordered that the annual function be revived this year. It is said that the Empress desires to hold the party to emphasize the spirit of reconstruction. Preparations for holding the party have just been started, but it is said that the flowers to be exhibited on the occasion will be much fewer in number than heretofore.

Polar Aerial Route To Europe In 36 Hours Seen

Tokio, Oct. 16.—Japan and Europe connected by air in 36 hours is a vision which Mr. H. Hammer of Seattle, a citizen of Denmark, seen as a possibility and gives as a reason for the attempt by Capt. Raold Amundsen, famed explorer, to fly across the north polar region in an airplane.

Scientific research to discover if there is another continent in the vicinity of the north pole is the basic reason, he told a representative of the advertiser in discussing the proposed flight. Mr. Hammer, arrived in Tokio last Saturday for a stay of about 10 days or two weeks.

The value of such a continent to the world, in Mr. Hammer's opinion is primarily as a flying base. It is doubtful, he marked, that such a place would prove profitable as a crop producing area, for example, even were it possible to raise wheat or other grain there during the summer, with its 24-hour day of constant sunlight.

PARTNER WITH EXPLORER
"The transportation costs would be too great," Mr. Hammer said, "ever to make it possible to export grain under present conditions. Coal might be found. But this, too, would be of little value to the world. Even gold or other precious metals would be of little comparative value, unless it were possible to ship them out by air."

Mr. Hammer has been associated for several years with Captain Amundsen, the world-renowned explorer who has lived a life of explorations and scientific endeavor in now and far flung reaches. He said they had spent more than $400,000 on the attempt to fly across the pole, or the polar region, at least, and that the effort still is alive.

"I am not in Japan, however, to make plans along that line," he commented. "While I am here I may look around a bit, for Japan makes the sort of plane we want. The visit is not official, however, and my wife and I are merely travelling around the world."

"Of course, we are always looking out for any suggestions that might help the success of the proposed flight. We hope to make it some time. Success only comes after failure. We are planning to make the attempt next spring or summer, if we can get our equipment in shape by that time."

Mr. Hammer gives journalism as his profession, and said he is writing some special articles on his journey. He said it has no connection with the flight, no direct connection at any rate, and that he is primarily interested in seeing the country.

VALUE OF POLAR FLIGHT
He pointed out, however, enthusiastically the value of a flight such as he and Captain Amundsen plan. They are partners in the venture. Mr. Hammer is greatly interested in it, and intends to discover whether the reports of others made on the polar north are true or not.

To this end, a vessel, The Maud, was sent into the circle two years ago, to freeze into the ice and float through with it from one side of the pole to the other. Instead of going right across, however, the ship tends to go in a circuitous route, indicating, it is believed, that something more than ice obstructs the flow. This ship, somewhere in the icebound recesses of the land beyond the Arctic circle—or the region, for it may not be land—has seven occupants who was stabbed three times in the chest. The battle, which took place yesterday near Alexandria, was reported to the authorities today.

According to the story told by Mrs. Foreman to Sheriff Downs of Rapides Parish, the fight was to have been one of those old-fashioned bare-knuckle and skull affairs, the victor of which was to be the undisputed custodian of the heart of A. D. Foreman, who, his wife says, had been dividing his attentions between his wife and Miss Lee.

The combat took place on a quiet stretch of the Lake Charles Alexandria Road, near Alexandria, according to Mrs. Foreman, and that it did take place she bears three wounds as evidence. The wounds are not serious, and Sheriff Downs is scratching his chin and saying nothing. He may or may not institute proceedings against one or all of the principals, he said, after consultation with the District Attorney.

"Now, if it had been men stabbing each other," the Sheriff declared, "it would have been a simple thing. But these women? It is best for a man to keep out of women's arguments until things simmer down."

Mrs. Foreman, accompanied by Miss Lula Benfield, a friend, drove from Lake Charles to Alexandria Monday with the express intention of whipping Miss Lee, she told the Sheriff.

"She stole my husband a year ago," Mrs. Foreman charged. "I got tired of it, and tired of her, and decided to settle once and for all whether he is to be my husband or her man."

Mrs. Foreman met Miss Lee on the Rapides Bayou Road—the same trail over which, three hundred years ago, the fair Evangeline had tramped in search of her lover Gabriel. The late afternoon sun bathed in gold the long tufts of Spanish moss in the live oaks. It was a good place for an affair of honor.

According to Mrs. Foreman, she opened conversation with her enemy about her husband. The argument was bitter and out of it came the challenge for "a fair fight" to settle the issue. The women were to stand toe to toe and slam away until one of them cried "enough."

The fight got under way and Miss Lee was getting the worst of it. Mrs. Foreman being more solidly built. Then, according to Mr. Foreman, she was stabbed and was forced to withdraw.

HISTORIC OAK SAVED BY GOV. PINCHOT.

Here is shown the official order, signed by Governor Clifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, saving the oldest oak tree in Chester County. The tree, 200 years old, stands in a bend in the road near the Upper Octoraro Presbyterian Church and cemetery at Parkersburg. Surveyors straightening the road were to have destroyed the tree, but the townspeople appealed to Pinchot, who, as former U. S. Forester, is a keen lover of trees, and who ordered it spared.

Airplane Sprayer Covers 5,000 Acres With Poison

More than five thousand acres of Southwest Texas cotton fields have been dusted with calcium-arsenic sprayed by airplanes this season in the annual war against the boll weevil.

Virtually all of this work was done by one airplane, the second not being equipped with the patented device for spraying until it was almost too late to use the poison. The first plane was fitted for work several weeks after ground dusting had already begun.

The work in Southwest Texas marks the first attempt of a commercial concern to fight the boll weevil by use of the airplane. The concern has its headquarters in San Antonio and is operated by war pilots. Next season the company hopes to put between twenty and thirty planes in the cotton-producing regions of Texas.

Supporters of airplane dusting say that it has a fourfold advantage over dusting with ground machinery. In the first place, the airplane can go to dusting immediately after a rain. This is the most advantageous time to fight the boll weevil; yet ground machines cannot be put into the field until the ground is dry. While the ground is drying the insect gets in his damaging work.

The rapidity and low cost at which air dusting can be done is claimed as a second advantage. One pilot can dust an average of two hundred acres an hour, and at a cost of 30 cents an acre. The farmer furnishes the poison, the tered. There is a negative charge of electricity in the growing cotton plant. A positive charge is in the atmosphere. It is claimed that the poison dust grains are shot through the air at such high velocity that they retain the positive charge of electricity in the atmosphere, and when settling on the cotton plant come in contact with the negative charge, which causes them to stick.

During the fight against the boll weevil, cotton fields should be dusted two or three times at intervals one week apart. When aerial dusting is used the aviator takes off as early as possible, so as to spray as much ground as possible while the dew is still on the plant.

The airplane flies from five to ten feet above the top of the plant. Because of the low altitude at which the plane must fly in dusting, expert pilots are required for the work.

"Began to think she would never get well."

Our Portrait is of Miss FLORENCE ORMAN, of 100, Clark Street, Ladywood, Birmingham, England, whose father writes:
"My daughter Florence was suffering with a very bad head covered with sores and eruptions, and in fact her mother was afraid to comb her hair. She had been under several doctors, but all to no purpose, so I began to think she would never get well again and lose all her hair. As you 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' cured me of Glaucoma, I decided to give 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' a fair trial in the case of my daughter, and I am pleased to say it effected a wonderful cure in just over a fortnight."

SUFFERERS from Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glaucoma, Swellings, Piles, Eczema, Rashes, Blanches, Spots, Pimples, Eruptions, Rheumatism, Gout, should realize that lotions and ointments can but give temporary relief; to be sure of complete and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter the root cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, eradicates and expels the impurities; that is why so many remarkable recoveries stand to its credit. Pleasant to take, and free from injurious ingredients.

Panama Canal Operates Successfully For Decade

Washington, Sept. 12.—The Panama Canal has been in operation for 10 years.

Early on the morning of August 15, 1914, the American steamship Ancon, with many distinguished guests on board, sailed from sea to sea without a hitch, completing the passage in 9 hours and 40 minutes. In succeeding days other ships followed in unexpected numbers, the first foreign vessel being the Dalmatian, on August 22. The Dalmatian was to have sailed around Cape Horn from Tacoma to Liverpool with a cargo of wheat, but the breaking out of the World War made it necessary for her to go through the Canal so as to get the wheat to its destination as quickly as possible. By changing her route she saved forty days of sea-voyage. Warships of various nations followed, the first being the Peruvian destroyer, Teniente Rodriguez, returning to home waters from the Amazon.

From the opening day to December 31, 1914, 350 ships had passed safely through the Canal, and in the year following the number had increased to 1,154, carrying a million and three-quarter tons of cargo. Down to the close of 1923, no fewer than 22,575 ships, with nearly ninety-five million tons of cargo, were carried from sea to sea without a single mishap.

The records of the Canal Commission for the nine fiscal years ending June 30, 1923, show, as was to be expected, that American vessels utilizing the canal outnumbered all others. The total transits in those years were 19,202, of which American vessels numbered 7,555, carrying 35,985,489 tons of cargo. In these figures are included cargoes trading between ports in the United States, in which commerce foreign vessels are not permitted to engage.

Great Britain came next in number of transits, 6,687 ships all told, with 26,485,241 tons of cargo—followed in order of importance by Norway, Japan, Chile, Denmark, Holland, Peru, France, Sweden, Spain, Italy, and Germany. The year 1923 was prosperous for the canal beyond precedent or expectation, and it is reasonably certain that in a few more years the entire cost of construction can be covered from tolls that are neither excessive nor burdensome.

CANAL PROJECTS

It is strange that the bay into which Columbus sailed on his last voyage to the New World should, over four hundred years later, be the Atlantic entrance to the Panama Canal. Shortly after he had given up his quest for the supposed passage to the Indies and returned to Spain, there arrived on the Isthmus a most remarkable man, Vasco Nunez de Balboa, with a party of adventures.

Balboa, marrying the daughter of an Indian chief, soon became the dominant spirit in the Spanish possessions in America, and in 1512, with a number of followers, he made the toilsome journey from Atlantic to Pacific. On the 25th day of September in that same year he discovered the Pacific Ocean, which he named the "South Sea," and of which he took formal possession in the name of the Spanish Emperor. Albeit his followers were a Spanish engineer, Alvaro de Saavedra, Ceron, to whom must be given the distinction of being the first to conceive the idea of an inter-oceanic canal. Returning to the Atlantic coast with Balboa, Saavedra made numerous surveys, and prepared plans to be transmitted to the Emperor, Charles V., but whether these ever reached their destination is questionable.

About 1594 Pascual de Andagoya, Inspector-General of the Indies, probably by command of Charles, caused several surveys to be made for a possible canal, but in the report to his Majesty Andagoya pronounced the undertaking impossible because of the fabulous expense it would entail. After the Emperor's death his son and successor, Philip II, considered Andagoya's plans, but his advisors urged the folly of a work which they considered impious. Almighty Wisdom having placed an "irremovable barrier" between the two oceans.

And so the idea of a waterway between the Atlantic and Pacific was dropped, and, apparently, forgotten for over two centuries. It was revived, however, late in the seventeenth century, when William Paterson, one of the directors of the Bank of England, was given royal authority to establish a colony in Dairen—the construction of a canal between the oceans being his ultimate object. The colony was established, but the deadly diseases of the tropics and the fierce attacks of the Spaniards reduced his party that the survivors were forced to return to England. Again, in 1780, the British Government sent out another expedition, this time to Nicaragua, under command of Major Polson, the future Admiral Nelson being one of his officers.

Disease and death played such havoc with the expedition that it also was forced to return.

LESSEPS' FAILURE

The loss of Spain's American possessions having put an end to Spanish activity in America, the United States made two investigations which came to nothing, and it was left for the French to begin the gigantic task. On New Year's Day, 1850, the work was started on the Isthmus, under the leadership of Ferdinand de Lesseps. The story of de Lesseps' operations in Panama is too recent and too tragic to dwell upon; circumstances quite beyond his control were responsible for the lamentable failure of the enterprise.

For the third time, the American Congress took up the canal project, and on June 28, 1902, authorized President Roosevelt to negotiate for the purchase of the French rights and property in Panama. The proposition was accepted by the French company and the purchase completed; and the United States, in consideration of the transfer of $22,000,000 of land, gave the Republic of Panama 100 million dollars, and these acres now constitute the Canal zone.

"IRREMOVABLE BARRIER"

The first great problem to be solved was the "irremovable barrier" of the Cordillera, a mountain range nine miles long and 100 feet wide at bottom, and only three feet at top, which covered the Isthmus with a magnitude, and no idea whatever of the heart-breaking obstacles that had to be overcome. In round figures, 200,000,000 cubic yards of rock and earth had to be torn from the mountain before the task was finished. Nearly twenty million pounds of high explosive, largely dynamite, were employed in the work of blasting. The digging of the canal, which made de Lesseps famous, was child's play compared with the work in Panama; the eighty miles of level sandy soil at base presenting none of the terrible problems that had to be solved by American engineers in Panama.

Another knotty problem was the Chagres River, which at times became a raging torrent rushing madly to the sea, leaving death and destruction in its wake. To harness that wild stream required the erection of a great reservoir, into which its turbulent waters could be directed. A dam over a hundred feet high, a mile and a half long, and half a mile broad, had to be built across Chagres Valley. Into Lake Gatun, as it is called, the Chagres River, even in its worst tantrums, hardly makes a ripple on the surface.

SANITARY PROBLEMS

The French had expended in their operations about three hundred million of dollars, but, unhappily, the time had not arrived when such a stupendous enterprise could be successfully carried out. Medical science had not then discovered that the deadliest scourge of the tropics, yellow fever, was caused only by mosquitoes of the evil stegomyia family. These pests had completely vanquished the French, counting their victims by thousands, high officials as well as negro workers. Luckily, Dr. William C. Gorgas, ranking as major in the American Army, had been made chief sanitarian of the Isthmus after his wonderful yellow fever campaign in Havana. Dr. Gorgas was fortunate in having the assistance of Major (now Sir) Ronald Ross, an Englishman, who had been called into the sanitary service and who had previously discovered that another brand of mosquito, the anopheles, was the cause of malaria. Gorgas had every stagnant pool along the line of the canal, every ditch, every breeding place of the mosquito covered with a film of kerosene to destroy the larvae. Every house, office, shop, and hotel connected with the canal, and in the cities of Panama and Colon, he had screened by fine wire netting to keep out the pests.

The canal has brought Japan, New Zealand, and Australian ports nearer to New York than to London. Actually Yokohama is nearer by 892 miles, Sydney by 7,612, Auckland by 3,660, and Wellington by 3,717 miles. Par contra, the whole western coast of the United States has been brought thousands of miles closer to London and other European ports—an advantage that will doubtless balance what otherwise might have been a loss. If the shortening of a sea voyage, even by a few hundred miles, results in lower transportation costs and stimulation of trade, how much greater must be the effect upon commerce when, not only hundreds, but thousands of miles are eliminated!

NICARAGUA ROUTE

Before the completion of the canal, experts differed as to the relative merits of Panama and Nicaragua as routes of inter-oceanic communication. Negotiations were carried on with Nicaragua as far back as 1854, and in 1890 the construction of a canal was actually begun on the Atlantic side. Three years later the company's resources were exhausted, and the project was abandoned.

The route across Nicaragua is about 150 miles in a straight line, but more than one-third of that distance is covered by Lake Nicaragua. This great body of water has an area of 2,000 square miles, its surface being 105 ft. above sea-level, and it is connected with the San Juan River. The Nicaraguan route, besides near Greytown, thence by canal to Lake Nicaragua, after passing through which it goes through the Rio Grande to Brito on the Pacific. It is safe to predict that the next canal to be constructed by the United States will follow that particular route.

People recover from flood and conflagrations, but scandal leaves its mark forever.

"The Breath of Scandal" will show everybody the way to avoid scandal.

Scientists Gasp Over New Engines Of Warfare

American Army General Tells Savants Of Latest Weapons Of Destruction; Range Is Now Increased

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—New and improved deadly weapons of war were described today by Major General C. O. Williams, Chief of Army Ordnance, before the World Scientists' meeting here at the Franklin Institute Contemporary.

Among the weapons described by Major General Williams were: High speed tanks, with guns in turrets instead of in the body of the tank.

A new trench mortar with greater accuracy of fire.

A 50 calibre machine gun that will replace the 30 calibre gun used in the World War.

A semi-automatic rifle for use as a shoulder weapon. It is now in the course of perfection.

A 75 millimeter field gun that has a range of 15,000 yards compared to the range of 9,000 yards of those used in the World War.

An increase in the range of all types by about one-fourth.

The General illustrated his address with lantern slides. A crowd that filled the room to capacity fairly gasped at some of the possibilities held forth by the powerful engines of war.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN IS IMPROVED

The anti-aircraft gun has been so improved since the World War that enemy planes bent on bombing a city can be swept from the sky, the officer declared. Its improved range is 8,400 yards, when fired straight into the air, and the horizontal range is 17,000 yards. While these weapons would not stop scout work by airplanes, Major Gen. Williams said, they would be effective in keeping bombers from cities.

The range of the 4.7-inch gun has been increased from 14,000 yards to 20,000 yards and the weight of the projectile increased from 45 pounds to 50.5 pounds.

The general also spoke of the 155 mm. rifle firing a 95-pound projectile. Its range has risen from 18,000 to 26,000 yards. The Ordnance Department is developing tractors to move artillery, remembering that when the World War began England was without tractors to move the big guns.

General Williams mentioning no name, addressed himself to a denial of the statement made two days ago by General Patrick that warships have been virtually eliminated from warfare through the development of airplanes.

DEVELOPMENT OF AIRPLANES

"There should be no fear that warships or battleships will be swept from the seas," General Williams said. "The development of anti-aircraft guns and the practice of carrying planes on the battleships themselves are sufficient safeguards. The warships will remain."

"From the long familiar Springfield rifle to our most powerful defence guns and howitzers, a sweeping change is taking place at our testing fields and ordnance shops."

John Browning has completed a new aircraft machine gun which will no doubt take the place of our present arm in this branch of the service."

Describing the new tanks, with their higher speed, the General said that some of them will attain 10 miles an hour and will weigh no more than 20 tons. In place of the portholes in the main body of the tank turrets surrounding the gun type from which guns bristle.

"The French 75-mm. gun was considered the best artillery piece during the war," said General Williams, "but today our new gun, also a '75,' has a range of 15,000 yards, compared to the 9,000 of the old piece, and can be elevated or lowered at will, something impossible in the old gun."

A new 105-mm. gun to succeed the 155-mm. piece, more easily moved and with a range of 20,000 yards, compared to the 12,000 of the old one, has been developed. It has a heavier projectile also.

The new 8-inch howitzers will fire a projectile 15,000 yards, whereas during the war this type of gun had a range of only 11,000 yards.

"There is also being developed a smokeless, shellless type of mortar," General Williams said. "It leaves a dull bluish glow about

DEFINES THE "FIFTH ESTATE"

The scientists witnessed the unveiling of a tablet at the opening of the Barol Research Foundation, a $1,300,000 bequest for the furthering of scientific endeavor.

Thirteen-year-old Trevesa Bartol Dalley, a grandniece of Henry, Weichman Bartol, pulled the cord releasing the purple hanging, a metal memorial tablet.

Dr. C. C. Tetlow, Vice President of the Franklin Institute, spoke, lauding the vision of Mr. Bartol in appreciating the value that the world receives from the labors of highly trained men.

From the Bartol laboratory, the scientists proceeded to the Academy of the Natural Sciences, where Dr. Arthur D. Little, of Harvard, spoke on "The Fifth Estate."

Defining the "Fifth Estate" as "that small company upon whose creative effort the world depends for the advancement of science," Dr. Little declared that the knowledge, vision and open mind possessed by members of the fifth estate should be brought to bear in the formulation of national problems.

"Our countrymen may well consider," he said, "whether they prefer participation in government by the fifth estate for the benefit of all, or control of government by labor unions in the interest of labor. Could the springs of human conduct and the affairs of people now be regulated only as wisely as we know how, there would be work and leisure and decent living for all."

"The criminal, the defective, the feeble-minded would be bred out and sane minds and strong bodies bred in. The loss and suffering from preventable disease and accident would not be tolerated, planning would be necessary, planning would be necessary, planning would be necessary to levels of efficiency attainable."

Announcement of the largest single order for high explosives for peaceful development was made before a sectional meeting of the scientists by Charles L. Rogers, director of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, Wilmington, Del., who stated that 100,000,000 pounds of pyroxylin had been ordered by the Government for construction and industrial work.

Measurements establishing the speed of light at approximately 186,000 miles a second were discussed by Mr. A. A. Michelson of the University of Chicago, another speaker.

The tests were conducted with a revolving mirror, he said, from Mount Wilson to a point on Mount

QUESTIONS WOMEN ASK

Why do I continually suffer? What am I to do to regain health? These are questions many women are desparately asking themselves, as they feel strength and vitality steadily diminishing day by day.

The trouble with most of these women lies in the blood. They are anemic—a condition especially common in the Far East—and because of this anemia, or blood poverty, the bodily functions have lost regularity, the digestion has grown weak, the nerves have become run-down, the eyes lack lustre, the glow of health has faded from lips and cheeks, despondency and pains have taken the place of that joyous care-free vigor which should be every woman's birthright.

What is the remedy? It is to restore to the blood, through the medium of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, the redness, richness and strength which it lacks and whereby new life, new energy, new health, may be carried through the veins to the nerves, to the organs, to every part of the system. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been doing just this work for over five-and-thirty years. It is for this reason that they are famous as a Blood and Nerve Tonic remedy throughout the world.

No matter whether you are man or woman, if you are a sufferer from any malady due to impure weak blood or disordered nerves, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do you good. Your chemist sells them, or post free, $1.50 per bottle, $8. for 6 bottles, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kinsale Road, Shanghai.

Function Of League Is Above Shifting Politics

Whenever there are changes of Government in Europe there is a certain ritual which has to be gone through again from the beginning, says J. A. Spender in the Westminster Gazette. The new Prime Minister has to visit his brother Prime Minister, or they him (perhaps both) they have to be photographed together in rustic surroundings, with pipes in their mouths; and it has then to be announced that after talking to each other by day and by night for 27 hours they are in "complete agreement."

So far, everything is satisfactory, but what usually happens next—or what has usually happened hitherto—is that one or other of the Prime Ministers goes home and is defeated, or holds an election and is thrown out. Thus the perfect understanding reached on the golf course at Cannes between Mr. Lloyd George and M. Briand at the beginning of 1922 was shattered the moment M. Briand got back to Paris and had to meet M. Poincaré in the Chamber; and similarly the reconciliation effected between M. Poincaré and M. Baldwin last August became waste paper when Mr. Baldwin threw himself out of the window a few weeks later.

ALLOWANCES NECESSARY

Large allowances must, of course, be made for all these statesmen. Hardly any of them even now has any secure majority in his own Parliament, and the casual business of international affairs can only be carried on in the very short intervals between the elections, which occupy most of the time of all the politicians in all the countries of the world. It requires a very rare combination of circumstances to ensure that the two or three principal performers in England, France, Italy and Belgium shall simultaneously enjoy an election-proof interval; and it is altogether hopeless to expect that this interval, when by some miracle it arrives in Europe, shall synchronise with a similar interval in America. Thus, at the present time, when Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and M. Herriot are relatively free from electioneering anxieties, Mr. Coolidge is in a position in which he cannot pledge his countrymen to anything definite for at least four months.

I lay stress on these conditions because when we are thinking about international affairs it is above all things important that we should understand them. It is a common and well-justified complaint that, though five years have elapsed since the treaty of Versailles was signed, we have made practically no progress in settling any of the major problems that it raises. But what else could we expect in the circumstances? The European problem as left by the treaty is a vast interlocked concatenation of agreements and undertakings requiring for their operation a continuous, consistent, unified administrative effort. It has been administered so far by a multitude of politicians, most of whom have cut in for a few months at a time and then vanished from the scene and been succeeded by others who have cut in for another brief period with entirely different ideas and policies. When the conciliators gain ground in one country, the militants gain ground in another, and settlements which might have served if both were conciliatory at the same time become inadequate or unacceptable when one is militant.

Thus, before they begin on the Dawes report, Mr. MacDonald and M. Herriot find themselves under the necessity of dealing with a militarist movement in Germany which is a reaction from the policy of M. Herriot's predecessor. In the circumstances they can not do otherwise, but to that extent their pitch is queued for the conciliatory policy which they both sincerely desire. And so it will go on, with see-saws in this direction or that, but no steady progress in any one direction, so long as the men in charge are transient and embarrassed phantoms who succeed one another and pass into limbo with the rapidity that has been characteristic of their movements during the past five years.

A PLEDGE AND A TEST

It is, therefore, with a real riot, after reaching the usual "complete agreement" in the preliminary ritual, pledge each other to meet in September at the Assembly of the League of Nations.

One draws from it two inferences: First, that they both expect to be on the scene when September comes; and, second, that they see their way through the conference on the adoption of the Dawes report, which is to take place in the interval. The "complete agreement" has, therefore, for the first time a definite pledge and test attached to it. If September comes and they are not at Geneva, they will—by their own test—have failed. To leap ahead so far is, I think, in the circumstances, an act of courage and faith for which both deserve credit. Judged by the past, it is a high test, and will draw upon them a large measure of concealed opposition, which can only be countered by an equal measure of open support. But that, I hope and believe, will be forthcoming.

For where else except to Geneva can we look for any element of continuity in the shifting scene of political Europe? When the treaty of Versailles was first published, some of us pointed out that the League of Nations Covenant was not, as most people seemed to think, a loosely attached pious aspiration, but an integral and necessary part of the treaty itself, a part without which the treaty simply would not work. Many people, including most of the authors of the treaty, tried to avoid this conclusion. They set up against it a body arrogantly called the "Supreme Council," which, since it was composed of politicians who were the children of the hour, just vanished like year's snow. Since then, a determination not to use the League has involved Europe in endless recommitments and deadlocks in which all the Governments have had to confess themselves helpless. Now at length it begins to dawn on some of them that the only thing to do is to get something settled and put it in charge of the League, which at least has a continuous existence, and is not subject to the changes and chances of the separate Governments.

This, I think, is how the League will come to be established as a force in the world. We are apt to think of it as just machinery for keeping the peace at some moment when it is threatened by the folly or wickedness of warmakers. Let us hope it may become that, but in Europe, as organised under the treaty of Versailles, it is an essential instrument of administration; and having deliberately set up a Europe which requires such an instrument, we must go forward with it, or put the treaty on the scrap-heap and return to the scramble for power.

NO CONCLUSION IS REACHED ON ZINOVIEFF NOTE

Cabinet Committee Unable to Decide On Question Of Authenticity

(Reuters Service)
London, Nov. 4.—The committee appointed by the Labor Cabinet to examine the authenticity of the Zinovieff letter reported that it is impossible on the evidence before them to come to a positive conclusion. They state that the original letter has not been produced to or seen by any Government department and action was taken on which was not claimed to be more than a copy.

The report adds that unfortunately in the short time available the committee found it impossible to obtain evidence throwing further light on the matter.

Six Million Ningpo Rush Hats Go To The United States Annually

A Business Which Is Almost Entirely In The Hands Of One Large French Firm

BY GEO W. MISSEMER

Although the industry is not one of great importance in the total of China's exports, still, seeing that out of a total of an annual export of a value of more than one hundred and fifty thousand taels, one hundred million taels worth are sent to America, bearing in mind that this business is nearly all in the hands of one French firm, and further in view of the fact that out of the eight-million odd of these hats that are exported from China about six million are manufactured in the nearby port of Ningpo—so close that the fare for the round trip is only ten Mexican dollars—it would seem that the class of merchandise described in the Customs returns as "rush" hats (but which the average person at first sight would term a cheap straw hat) would serve as a profitable side line for some American firm in Shanghai.

HATS VERY CHEAP

A better idea of the general cheapness of these rush hats may be gleaned from the fact that the declared value of the eight million six hundred thousand rush hats exported from China to foreign countries last year was only Tls. 154,391. The 5,874,672 of these rush hats exported to America last year were declared at the Customs House to have a value of Halkwan $3,298. A Halkwan tael is roughly a Mexican dollar and a half. This means that these hats are valued at two-and-a-half Mexican cents each. The "each" value of the hats exported to other countries is even less.

MILADY'S HEADGEAR

The explanation of the fact that the value of these "two-and-a-half cent" hats which go to America is not as low as those going to some other countries is that quite a large proportion of the hats going to America are eventually destined to crown the head of milady—hence the higher relative price.

The making of these hats is an important industry in Ningpo and might be described as a sort of home and factory industry combined. Nearly all these hats have wide brims and have just the appearance of the hats one sees in the comic pictures on the heads of the Southern American "darkies" as they plow their way into a watermelon. In fact a large business in these hats is done with the Southern states where they are worn by the agricultural population in practically the same form as they are exported from China.

Very much the same hat, with just a little different twist here and a different weave there, is used in the finest of Fifth Avenue's millinery trade, where, with the addition of ribbons, trimmings, and flowers it blossoms out into one of the season's classiest models.

America's Competitors And Customers In International Trade

Great American Industries Depend On Raw Products Which The Country Does Not Produce

For reasons which are so well-known that it is unnecessary to reiterate them here, an essentially new conception of the relation of foreign trade to the national economy and wellbeing of the United States began to obtain currency in American business and financial circles during the European War and the discussion of this conception and of its implications has become steadily more widespread in the years since the war. In the pre-war period the country's trade with the rest of the world, though its vital importance to large classes of our population was of course clear to all eyes, after all received very little theoretical consideration, its composition and direction being generally regarded as due to natural causes which might fairly be left to operate in the future as they had in the past. In other words, up to a decade ago our foreign trade pretty much took care of itself, the assumption being that other countries would come to us for those of our products of which we had a surplus and for which they had need—particularly foodstuffs, cotton, copper, petroleum and petroleum products, and some other raw materials and similar commodities—while we in our turn should import chiefly such articles of distinctive and exceptional quality as our own industries were not prepared to supply, along with a comparatively small list of raw materials, foodstuffs, etc., not produced in the United States.

The handling of these various exports and imports was left wholly to the different groups of exporting and importing merchants, who were conceived to be familiar with the domestic and foreign markets in their respective fields of activity and whose commercial self-interest was supposed to be a sufficient incentive to them to explore all the possibilities of foreign trade that held the promise of being desirable and profitable, whether from their own standpoint or from that of the country as a whole. Under this system, of course, there was next to no co-ordination of effort in our interchanges of products and goods with the rest of the world; we had no foreign trade policy; and nobody thought of our foreign trade as a systematically developed whole harmoniously accommodated to our entire economic organization and designed to give added strength and stability to that organization in all its essential parts.

WORLD WAR'S EFFECTS

This manner of regarding our foreign trade has been profoundly affected, and substantially changed by our industrial and commercial experience during and since the war. One of the most impressive economic lessons of the war period proper for the American people was that our productive industries, both mechanical and agricultural, were capable, under the stimulus of the insatiable demand not only from war-stricken Europe but also from other countries formerly dependent upon Europe for necessary goods, of producing quantities of products much in excess of the normal consumptive requirements of our own population and that exceptional prosperity resulted from the marketing of these products abroad. Moreover, this demonstration of the value of foreign trade to our national economy was reinforced by our experience in the years from 1920 onward when, partly by reason of the gradual restoration of industry in Europe to a peace basis and partly on account of the impoverishment and reduced purchasing power of the countries involved in the war, the foreign demand for our surplus production of all kinds suddenly fell off to even less than its pre-war proportions, and our manufacturers and farmers alike found themselves producing much more than the markets then open to them could absorb, and consequently suffering all the hardships implied by such a situation.

THE EXPORT PROBLEM

The problem of developing adequate foreign markets for the surplus products of our industries and our agriculture was quickly seen to be one of the most pressing of all the problems with which American business men, economists and even political leaders have to deal. Furthermore, thinking had not long been turned in this direction before it began to be perceived that the problem of export markets is not a one-sided affair; that on the contrary, it is intimately correlated with a similar problem on the import side of the account. Our industrial development has now become such that our import trade no longer consists principally of the finding and bringing into the United States of distinctive and exceptional articles likely to appeal to the taste of special groups or classes of American consumers; we have today great industries whose very life depends upon abundant supplies of raw materials which this country does not produce. For purposes of illustration it is enough to mention in this connection the great tin plate industry; the huge rubber and automobile tire industries; the extensive industries using jute and burlap as a raw material; the woolen industry, more than half of whose raw material must be imported; the leather industry, whose position is similar to that of the woolen industry; the silk industry; the industries using sisal and hemp; and so on with a long list. Nor must it be forgotten that the comfort and satisfaction of living for the American people as a whole would be greatly diminished if it were deprived of the imported coffee and tea, bananas and other tropical fruits and foodstuffs, and numerous other articles of diet to which it has become habituated. No long reflection upon these facts is required to make it clear that an adequately developed import trade is at the present time scarcely less a necessity to the United States than an adequately developed export trade. In truth, the two are complementary the one to the other, forming inseparable parts of a single problem. It perhaps need not be added that the correctness of this statement becomes still more apparent when the financial aspects of our trade with the rest of the world are considered.

WHERE THE FIELD LIES

It is interesting to note that of late, as discussion of our foreign trade situation among men of affairs and economists has gradually produced a more general appreciation of the interdependence of the problems involved, we find expectations of the need of a co-ordinated and consistently developed foreign trade policy for the country becoming more numerous, and increasing evidence of systematic study of the possibilities offered by our commercial relationships with the different countries of the world. It is plain that the tendency of the best thinking in this domain is to abandon the old conception of foreign trade as hit-or-miss hunting for markets for the products we have to sell and equally hit-or-miss scouring the earth for goods or commodities which American consumers will be likely to buy. In place of this conception we find the more fruitful theory emerging that the truly effective and adequate development of our foreign trade as a whole presupposes intelligently directed effort in respect both of the foreign markets in which we seek to sell and of those upon which we are to rely for the raw materials and other products we need to buy. In order that effort may be intelligently directed in these regards, moreover, the guiding spirits in this department of our economic life must be completely informed as to the actual facts of production and consumption, of industrial and commercial interest and tendency, in all the countries of the world with which we have commercial relationships.

Thus, it is futile to strive greatly to expand and make permanent the markets for our products in those countries whose industries are naturally competitive with, rather than complementary to, our own. In the long run the measure of our success in such countries will certainly not be large. On the other hand, we should study with the greatest attention the possibilities of trade development with those countries whose productive industries either do not compete with ours to an important extent or, better still, can supply us with products indispensable to the operation of our own industries. Here the promise of the future is greatest. And before all else it is imperative that those who have the larger direction of our foreign trade should be accurately informed as to the countries that are naturally our industrial and commercial competitors and as to the character of the competition to be expected from them.

JAPAN SPECIE BANK TRYING TO ABSORB MUCH FOREIGN CURRENCY

The overseas specie holdings of the Yokohama Specie Bank have suddenly increased by about ¥40,000,000 to ¥150,000,000, as the result of its strenuous efforts to absorb as much specie as possible in foreign countries. The Bank management gave up its old policy of artificially maintaining the exchange rates. This was done in conformity with the principle established at a recent meeting held with the Finance Minister, Mr. Hamaguchi, Mr. Ichiki, Governor of the Bank of Japan, Mr. Kodama, president of the Yokohama Specie Bank, and other leading financiers. The Bank has decided to follow the general situation in exchange rates and has therefore twice lowered its official rate since that meeting.

JAPAN WELL PREPARED

This shows that Japan is well prepared for over-importation for the first half of next year, if it attains ¥500,000,000. The raw silk business has become remarkably prosperous recently while on the other hand the importation of raw cotton is on the decrease and no big importation of cargo is expected for the rest of the year. This gives us the idea that Japan's foreign trade is gradually taking a turn for the better and the situation is acting favorably on the exchange rate. The open market rate for the yen-dollar exchange has now been revived somewhat. It is reported that the Yokohama Specie Bank will try to replenish Japan's overseas specie in connection with the recent loan agreement concluded between the Kelhan Electric Railway Company and Lazard Brothers in London amounting to ¥22,000,000. At the same time the Bank will gradually restore its official rate to its normal level but not without taking into consideration Japan's foreign trade situation.

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

Mr. Kodama, president of the Yokohama Specie Bank, a few days ago had a conference with Mr. Hamaguchi, Finance Minister, Mr. Den, administrative vice-minister, Mr. Ichiki, Governor, and Mr. Kimura, vice-governor, both of the Bank of Japan, and Mr. Tomita, director of the financial affairs bureau, in the Finance Department, submitting detailed reports on the policy now being adopted by the Bank regarding the exchange situation. Mr. Kodama stated at the meeting that the Bank is trying to absorb as much specie as possible on foreign markets and that signs indicate a turn for the better in the exchange situation. He also explained the business boom in which Japanese silk is now finding its way in large quantities to America and Europe and was also optimistic over the future exchange situation in connection with the active export trade of the country.

Standard Oil Denies It Broke Missouri Law

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—An answer setting forth that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana had lived up to the spirit and letter of the Missouri Supreme Court's order of June 28, 1913, with respect to the State's anti-trust laws, was filed today in reply to the counter action of Attorney General Barrett, filed Sept. 11.

The answer pleads that the company has, by its licensing of other manufacturers to use its refining methods, aided its competitors in enlarged trade opportunities instead of restraining trade, and has served the public in such a way that the price of gasoline has been kept more nearly to the level of 1913 than prices of any other commodity in general use.

The proceeding begun in September seeks to set aside the Supreme Court order of 1913 permitting the company to do business so long as it obeys the State laws. That conditional order followed a judgment in 1909, in which the company was held to have violated the laws and was ordered ousted from the State.

The answer states that by its own processes the company, through licensing other refiners to use its patents, was able to produce double the percentage of gasoline previously derived from a barrel of crude oil.

From the residue, after gasoline and kerosene had been extracted from petroleum under former methods, the company produced a new product, virtually identical with gasoline as formerly distilled. Such a new gasoline, or special product, could not lawfully exist except as the company authorized the use of its patent for such production, the answer says in reference to the Missouri Attorney General's declaration that "gasoline is gasoline" and its manufacture could not be patented.

By its methods as a pioneer developer and in licensing others to use its processes, the answer says, "the corporation has served the public and has voluntarily enlarged the trade opportunities of its competitors, instead of reserving all the benefits of its patents exclusively to itself, as it lawfully might have done."

The answer sets up that the White Eagle Oil and Refining Company, the Lion Oil and Refining Company and the Texas Company are competing in Missouri with the Standard Oil Company, and that none of them is limited as to marketing territory. The patented process, it asserts, produced an economy in the cost of gasoline and increased the supply and "that the effect of the license did not tend nor did it give the Standard Oil Company any monopoly or power to restrain trade."

In 1913 and 1914, it states, the company did more than 75 per cent. of the business in gasoline and other petroleum products in its territory and in Missouri, and that there has been "a constantly increasing and intense competition in the sale of such products in said territory," so that as a result of such competition the company at present is not doing more than 45 per cent. of the business in its territory and in Missouri.

The Election Of President Coolidge

ALL of the news reports from the United States indicate the election of Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States for the next four years. President Coolidge ran on a platform frankly conservative and although it is too early to know what has happened in respect to Congress, it is indicated that the Republicans will have a safe majority in the House of Representatives but may not have a clear majority in the Senate over a coalition of Democrats and Progressives.

The significant element in the election results of course is the defeat of Senator La Follette and the Progressive Party. La Follette ran on a liberal or radical platform which promised a great deal but which was indefinite as to methods. He attracted to his side the socialists and the radicals in organized labor, but apparently when the crucial time came labor voted for stability and certainty rather than for promises of a millionth with possibilities of no jobs. The fact that La Follette entered the race on a radical platform probably will have a good effect upon the general political situation in the United States, for with the socialists and labor out in the open with their own platform, there is less danger to the established institutions of the American Democracy than there has been in the past when these elements concealed themselves within the ranks of the other parties and fought from within. The same thing applies to Mr. La Follette who has always called himself a Republican, but who has never played the game with the organization. Whether the Progressives will be able to continue as a separate party remains to be seen. There is hope that they may be able to continue for there is room in America for a party of protest, especially since the Republicans and Democrats in recent years have come to stand principally for the same things.

The natural thought of the American resident in the Orient after reading the results of the election is to ask: What does this mean for American policy in this part of the world?

From the standpoint of the Philippines it means no immediate independence. The Republicans are pledged to the so-called Fairfield Bill which provides for autonomy for the Islands with independence in twenty-five years if the Filipinos at that time indicate their desire for independence in a general election held for that purpose.

From the standpoint of China, the election of Coolidge should mean a continuance of American policy so well started at the Washington Conference. We say "well-started" at the Washington Conference, but have no similar complimentary words for what Secretary Hughes has done in this respect since the close of the Conference. A Coolidge victory should also facilitate a cooperation of America with the Conservative Government in Great Britain in respect to policies in this part of the world.

In brief the election of Coolidge should mean stability and a continuance of orderly government. The Republicans, it is hoped, have learned some lessons from the troubles of the Harding administration and should profit accordingly.

And lastly, the election in the United States, as well as the one in Britain a few days ago, should have some lessons for China. In both America and Britain the political contests this year have been the most bitter in a decade, but the great vital problems were settled in an orderly manner and without bloodshed or disturbance of business or society. China is trying to maintain a modern Republic but her leaders are applying the methods which the West discarded many centuries ago.

The New Alignment Of The Political Map

IT still is too early to determine exactly what the new alignment is to be in the Chinese political situation, but the official statement given out by Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan on Tuesday evening of this week seems to indicate that the Peking coup and the defeat of the Chihli forces in the North has simply had the effect of bringing Fengtien influence one step nearer the Yangtze Valley. In other words, although Marshal Chang Tso-lin has disavowed any intention of interference in the new government which the Christian General, Feng Yu-hsiang, has set up in Peking, the fact remains that no government under present conditions would be able to stand for long in Peking without his support and cooperation.

Without considering the effect of the Peking coup on the South, the Peking Government now rests upon the strength of the Christian General and General Yen Hsi-shan, the so-called governor of the "model" province of Shansi—and upon Marshal Chang Tso-lin of Mukden who now, in association with the Christian General, controls most of Chihli Province.

This leaves Marshal Wu Pei-fu and his associates in control—nominal or actual—of Chekiang, Hupeh, Shantung (Shantung may split between Anfu and Chihli), Honan, Shensi, Anhwei, Kiangsi, Kiangsu and Szechuen. Although nothing was said in General Chi's statement about Szechuen, it would seem that that province would stick to the Loyang warlord, for his Lieutenant General Yang Sen of Chengtu has only recently come into control of that province, but of this there is no certainty now.

The dramatic action of the Christian General in seizing control of the Peking Government so completely overturned the situation that there appeared for a time a possibility that he might be able to "put over" his scheme for "reunification-by-conference" but now that the situation has settled down somewhat, it would seem that the result has been only to bring about a new alignment and redrawing of the political map. If Marshal Wu Pei-fu is coming to the Yangtze Valley as the reports from the North indicated yesterday, he will be in a practically impregnable position from the standpoint of attack from the North. Therefore the situation may settle down on these lines and actual fighting may stop for a period in order to enable the military chiefs to rebuild their fences and find out where they stand.

Probably the most interesting phase of the new situation will be the attitude of the Powers in reference to recognition of the Peking Government. Are the Western Powers and Japan going to follow Marshal Wu Pei-fu into the Yangtze Valley and leave Peking to Ambassador Karakhan and Moscow, or are they going to transfer their affections to the new regime supported by the Christian General and Chang Tso-lin of Mukden. If the situation were not so serious it would be humorous: one needs but imagine the conferences now taking place among the solemn-faced diplomats in Peking. Certainly their position is not an enviable one. Their chief occupation these days seems to be devoted to the operation of an international train every day between Peking and Tientsin. Apparently the Diplomatic Corps is going to keep the Boxer Treaty alive and in working order regardless of what happens elsewhere in China. We wonder what the Diplomats would do if Marshal Wu and his associates in the Yangtze Valley would decide to establish a new capital at Hankow!

Other Views Than Ours On The War In China

GREED OF MILITARY POLITICIANS CAUSE OF CHINA'S WAR
(By Thomas Steep, N. Y. Herald-Tribune)

Chinese militarists enjoy an advantage in that their motives and movements are largely incomprehensible to the world outside China. It is difficult for Westerners to deduce from current news dispatches from China just what the Chinese civil war is about. A Chinese general betrays nothing of his personality by his name. Wu Pei-fu, Chang Tso-lin, Tsao Kun, Chi Hsieh-yuan and Lu Yung-hsiang are names suggestive of little to the average Occidental.

To understand the Chinese situation it is essential to realize that these names belong to politicians with military backing and with wealth accumulated in past military activities and that their motives are precisely the same as the motives of unscrupulous politicians elsewhere.

It is also essential to realize that in the battles around Shanghai and almost 1,000 miles northward near Peking the 350,000, 600 Chinese people have absolutely no personal interest, that there is no principle involved on either side to arouse popular sentiment and that the civilians, if they pay any heed at all to the fighting, regard it as a kind of national nuisance, which afflicts them individually in varying degrees.

If a Chinese merchant has his establishment raided and burned by soldiers he considers he has been ruined. If he is forced to pay tribute to support unwelcome invaders he endures it as he would a mosquito bite. If the mosquito flies elsewhere and bites others it is no concern of his. The Chinese people cultivate no hero worship, and no leader in the present crisis possesses any great share of popular favor or is regarded as holding forth a promise of ultimate internal harmony. The greatest heroism the military chiefs could display to their country, in the collective mind of the Chinese people, would be to stand in opposite lines and shoot themselves. That would be about the only military spectacle the people would pay an admission to see.

In the sense that the Chinese civil war is a thing apart from the Chinese people—is, in fact, a kind of a parasite—it can have no important result, evolutionary or revolutionary, on China as a whole. Chang Tso-lin may win, or, more probably, Wu Pei-fu may win, but China will remain as it was, scarcely bruised by the feeble blows. It will survive pin pricks.

The Chinese people contemplated the indecisive military fiasco of two years ago just as they are contemplating the present one—either with disfavor or indifference. They know that the future of China depends not upon destructive militarists like Wu, Chang, Lu and Chi, but upon constructive statesmen like Dr. Siao Ke Alfred Sze, the Chinese Minister to Washington; Wellington Koo, the Foreign Minister; Dr. Wang Chung-hui, the cultured former chief justice of the Chinese Supreme Court, and, perhaps, Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who thus far has refrained from participating in the struggle.

As to Feng Yu-hsiang what he must do, I need only ask him to review all that has been done in the late past by the militarists, and he may draw the conclusion for himself. People are not always so foolish as they seem to be, once they are made to suffer too much, they are likely to turn the next

"TIME TO MAKE GOOD THE SUGARLY WORDS"
Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Sir: Three-and-ten years ago, we took a similar glorious action as that taken by the French approximately one century and a quarter from today—a complete overthrow of the corrupt government of the Ching Dynasty, or in other word, a revolution. Well, we did succeed, what I might say, in form but not in spirit.

In asserting this, we must have a retrospect of the corrupt Manchus regime, and compare it with that of the present. By that time the Emperor's order could have no effect outside of the imperial city, because the viceroy of the province was himself a monarch in his own province, and could do whatever he preferred. By the Revolution of 1911 we have put an end to the Manchus regime, but how is the present one compared with that of the Manchus? Nothing new except that we have the Tuchen instead of the viceroy who rules with as absolute a hand as the latter. Since the founding of the republic, one coup d'etat after another by the militarists has taken place, and as a consequence of that, the country is always in a chaotic and dangerous status.

During these ten and three years, we have had incessant civil wars of which we really are tired. Everyone in overthrowing another attempts to prevail upon the people with sugarly and empty promise of a better government in the future, and we now no longer believe them. Can we then trust General Feng Yu-hsiang? In possibilities, he is no better than his predecessors in so far as his past actions are concerned. His present coup d'etat is the result probably more of a personal feeling than his pretended patriotism. However, we shall see the truth before long.

Feng is now calling a "round-table place conference" for the betterment of the political conditions in China, and it is certainly a glorious thing for him to do. But whether or not he will be successful, and what result will this conference bring about, we have no idea whatsoever yet. If the conference would actually take place, only one thing we can make sure of. Unless the warlords have the true sublime spirit of sacrificing their respective interest and come to an understanding to govern this long suffering country conscientiously, the conference will come to nothing at all as we have seen in the last conference in Shanghai. But this can never be done without "A Revolution of Conscience" of those who are in power. A mere physical revolution can cure the country only in appearance as the Revolution of 1911 had, because the next man who comes to power may, if he cannot resist the temptation of power, commit the same mistake over and over again, and that is what is happening in China today. And—remember, that the returned students are no exceptions from that rule.

The next thing I have to comment upon is that we have to do away with the present Parliament, see what they have done to China. They are just mean slaves of Mammon. Money, money, and money, that is what they always are after. They are willing to pass any bill on condition that they are well paid for. They are no representatives, they usurp the holy name in order to cram for money, and try to make a good business of it. Is it fair, and are they the kind of men we call our representatives? Had they been supporters of principles, and lovers of their mother country, could Tsao Kun have possibly been elected as the President of China and many intolerable measures been passed? It is really too clear to require any answer for them. And therefore a has the Parliament, before we can possibly have any good government.

I have a word or two for those who will take part in the peace conference, when it would be convened. That it is the time for them to do the duty and to make good the sugarly words they are used to give us. It is no use styling always what you cannot do. We have had enough of that. If you continue to be what you are all these years, you have no facts good reason to believe what Mr. Hsu Meng-hung declared in today's paper—a revolution. It is advisable to remember that two extremists always meet, we people are getting too tired of your intolerable rule, and we can no longer bear it.

As to Feng Yu-hsiang what he must do, I need only ask him to review all that has been done in the late past by the militarists, and he may draw the conclusion for himself. People are not always so foolish as they seem to be, once they are made to suffer too much, they are likely to turn the next time upon the offender and it will then be too late for him to repent.

Yours sincerely,
CHEN WEI-GUN,

THE FAIRFIELD BILL AND PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE
Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: Your story regarding the Fairfield Bill as approved by the Philippine Independence Mission is correct, only that it fails to state that in view of the impossibility of any further concession under the present Administration, the Mission was compelled to endorse the bill.

In reality, the Fairfield Bill does not fully satisfy the national aspirations of the Filipino people for immediate and complete independence.

I shall greatly appreciate it if you can supplement your story with this additional information.

THE COUP D'ETAT IN PEKING
Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir:—The coup d'etat which was carried out by General Feng Yu-hsiang a few days ago should be of particular interest to students of Chinese politics today. It is significant, because it shows clearly that the formula of unification by force as has been repeatedly advocated by Wu Pei-fu does not seem to produce a good result in this era when militarism is condemned throughout the civilized world. When Wu's disciples are clamoring that Wu alone can save China, the coup d'etat in Peking should be able to convince them that after all Wu is not a strong man, a man that can be respected by the present political leaders of the country. As he cannot even control his own party, how can he govern China?

The Chinese people here and abroad are rather tired of the monstrosities of civil wars that have been raging in the country since 1911. They prefer peace more than anything else. The shedding of blood and the destroying of properties are abominable and humiliating. The leaders of the coup d'etat seem to have sensed the wishes of the people and understood the necessity of having peace. If they are really inspired by high ideals and have in their hearts the patriotic desire of reorganizing the country for the laying of the foundation of a true republican form of government, why should they not receive the support of the people?

Our people who have experienced the atrocities of war should not let everything in the country shift for itself. We should not believe too much in Fate and then leave our country into the hands of a few unscrupulous and barbarous militarists. Wu Pei-fu has been using all his efforts to make the DOCTRINE OF BISMARCK fit for a country where republicanism is supposed to be the pride of its citizens. He is trying his best to make every Chinese bow before the sword. Will, then, the Chinese people continue to submit to his dictate? Have we not enough spirit to throw away the yoke of tyranny and the thing that is most likely destructive to the structure of our national fabric? The time is now ripe for the different organizations backed up by the Chinese people to rise up against the militarists.

The coup d'etat in Peking should act as a means for the Chinese people to stand up at once and unite for the defense of their country against any military encroachment. The movement for a round-table conference should be convened immediately and all the militarists should be forced to obey to the wishes of the people. The civil war should be settled once for all. We must not dilly-dally in matters that concern not only the present but also the future of our country. The people have already suffered too much from the barbarous acts of the militarists. Innocent men, women and children are butchered and slaughtered without mercy. Lives and properties are destroyed and rased to the ground. The blood of the dead runs like water in a stream, but the militarists laugh and with swords in their hands, saying: As you cannot do anything, we are forced to do something.

Last of all, will our people stand up like a man and march up before the blood-thirsty militarists and say: Lay down your arms. Go back to your homes and leave us the management of the country? If so, the coup d'etat in Peking should be backed up.

Once Overs

BY J. J. MUNDY

Perhaps you have some relatives who are not so fortunate as you. Their provincialism, uncouth manners and speech is annoying to you.

You try to avoid having them meet your friends for you are ashamed of them.

Do you realize that you are discarding your own blood for those who may care little for you, save for your agreeable companionship or entertainment?

Your own relatives would stand by you through thick and thin.

They would be glad to befriend you at any time, but you throw them aside for those who like you for the pleasure you give them in your present position.

If you should for any reason have to give up your position in society or change your mode of living, the new friends would vanish and your relatives stick.

Neglect and studied avoidance of your relatives is like a sore stab to them.

Naturally they would like to be friendly to you.

They would be glad to accept any sort of entertainment you offered, and they are proud of you for what you have attained.

It hurts them to think that because you are above their station, as it seems to them, you no longer think they are good enough to associate with. You are the loser by it.

The Secret of Polar Nights and Days Illustrated

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

practically correct, but owing to the phenomena of refraction by the atmosphere, the sunlight indirectly reaches either pole of the earth long after the time when "perpetual night" should have begun there, and long before the theoretical beginning of "perpetual day."

Under favorable circumstances in the temperate zones twilight begins in the morning or ends in the evening when the rotation of the earth has sunk the sun about 18 degrees below the horizon. The time required for this varies with the latitude, being shortest at the equator. The apparent westward motion of the sun through the sky occurs at the rate of 15 degrees per hour, which makes the mean duration of twilight an hour and twelve minutes after sunset and the same before sunrise, and thus nearly two and a half hours of partial illumination are added to the diurnal period of full sunlight.

But at the poles, and within the polar circles, the phenomena of the rising and setting of the sun and the duration of twilight are quite different. Why they are different may be seen with the aid of a diagram. The picture shows the situation at the Summer solstice, about June 21, when the sun reaches its highest northern declination (about 23 1/2 degrees), and when the whole area within the Arctic Circle is continually in the sunlight. The sun is so far north that its light streams right over the pole and reaches down the farther slope of the globe to the latitude 66 1/2 degrees north, which is that of the Arctic Circle. At the pole itself the altitude of the sun above the horizon is 23 1/2 degrees, and in the course of every twenty-four hours, instead of either rising or setting, it simply circles around the sky, keeping very nearly at the same height.

But it does not keep precisely the same altitude. As it winds around the sky, after the Solstice, it very slowly sinks toward the horizon. By July 1 it is but a trifle more than 23 degrees high; by July 15 its altitude is about 21 1/2 degrees, and by August 1 it is only 18 degrees. It continues to sink until the Autumn equinox, about September 23, when theoretically and disregarding the effects of refraction which keep it still fully visible for a couple of days, it "sets" for the North Pole. Then twilight begins. Refraction is an uncertain quantity in those latitudes, and we will neglect it; but without refraction, the sun takes from September 23 to about November 13 to descend 18 degrees below the horizon of the North Pole. In other words, the evening twilight at the North Pole must last about fifty-one days after the sun has sunk below the equator, or what is the same in effect, below the polar horizon.

In the same way, before the sun rises above the Equator (and the North Pole horizon) at the Vernal Equinox, March 20, twilight begins at the pole while the sun is still 18 degrees below. Now the sun reaches that declination (18 degrees S.) January 30, which is about fifty-one days before the Vernal Equinox, i. e., before true sunrise at the North Pole. So the polar evening and the morning twilights together cover nearly three and a half months, and absolute night, deprived of all trace of sunlight, lasts only about two and a half months each year. But always there is the starlight, sometimes probably there are brilliant auroral illuminations; and after the sun has gone, the full moon remains, and the polar full moons may be the most splendid that the earth knows. But that is another story.

TO A MAID OF EIGHTEEN
 Cheer up, little girl,
 Wipe away your tears.
 Why begin so early
 To have foolish fears?
 You are very pretty,
 You are graceful, too;
 Somewhere in the city
 Fortune waits for you.

You have lovely features,
 You have soulful eyes;
 When my glances meet yours
 My discretion dies;
 You'll have lots of lovers,
 Maiden in your teens,
 Looking like the covers
 On the magazines.

Artists will implore you
 To consent to pose;
 Johnnies will adore you,
 You're a budding rose!
 Maiden, cease your fretting;
 Ziegfeld will not fall
 Some day to be setting
 Scouts upon your trail.

Fate has marked you clearly
 For applause and praise;
 She may charge you dearly
 After many days;
 But don't let your terrors
 Be unduly stirred—
 You may shun the errors;
 Such things have occurred.

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

At Last Women Are Again Interested in Gloves, and Buy Them, Long and Short, for All Hours

As the manufacturers and merchants put it, "a healthy condition" prevails with gloves. No need of doctors or nurses, tonics or antitoxins there, thank you.

You know what that means. Women at last have been prevailed upon to spend what the glove dealers regard as a decent and proper proportion of their dress money on gloves. Perhaps they may be induced to spend a little more than ever before. It has been difficult to bring about just this situation, for women have acquired the habit of going gloveless on many occasions. It seemed futile to try and persuade them to do otherwise. If they won't spend money buying many gloves, then let them be persuaded to spend much money buying a few gloves—that was the logic of the glove makers. So gloves have been made elaborate.

Women do not go to their glove dealers and simply order gloves by the half dozen or dozen. That sort of thing used to be done. Now each pair of gloves is different—as different as hats and, somewhat more elaborately ornamented than really smart hats are nowadays.

For instance, gloves are trimmed with silver kid—sometimes with gold kid. Bright-colored glass kid is used to trim white, black or other conventionally colored gloves. A pair of white kid gloves shows clubs, diamonds, hearts and spades in bright red or white kid applied upon them. Presumably one wears such gloves to a bridge party. These are short gloves with a turn-back cuff.

Flaring cuffs and Biarritz gloves are also well liked, and these are elaborately trimmed. Sometimes there is elaborate embroidery of metal and silk. Fur is used, not in generous warmth-giving hands about the cuffs, but quite discreetly in a narrow band at the edge of the cuff. Cut-out flower designs on black gloves show a white silk lining beneath and cut-outs on white gloves show bright-colored silk beneath.

A white kid glove shows a cuff lined with plaid silk, following the insatiable fondness for Scotch tartans in France. Batik finds a place to show its delicate design on the cuffs of tan and brown kid gloves, and a pair of light beige kid gloves shows a cuff of slightly darker beige fabric woven with black, greens and rose in floral design, somewhat resembling tapestry.

Ask your friend who has recently returned from Paris what the glove situation is there and you may meet with some confusion. Longer gloves are seen at afternoon and evening affairs, yet sometimes women wear short gloves with sleeveless frocks even for evening, and sometimes they wear no gloves at all. If you wish to follow the Paris precedent in long gloves, then choose light gray or cream-colored long gloves. If you choose the more striking contrast of short gloves with evening dress, then wear light kid gloves with short cuffs showing a lining of gold or silver brocade. Smart American women are following this French trick of wearing short gloves with sleeveless evening frocks.

At top, white kid glove with Scotch plaid silk lining to cuff, and brown suede glove in two shades, with three pierced and scalloped frills. On figures, beige kid gloves. Below, bridge gloves in white kid, with heart, spade, club and diamond in red, and black applied on cuffs; scalloped gloves bound and decorated with figured silk, and light beige kid glove with cuff of woven fabric in tan and black, with roses of red and green.

YOUR MONDAY TASKS

Monday has been considered the suitable day for doing the family washing for so long that the old-fashioned housewife often feels that the work goes more easily where a Monday wash day can be arranged. In the good old days a Monday wash day was more prevalent and more reasonable. In the average middle-class family where one or two maids were employed there was distinct advantage in getting at the laundry work the first work day of the week. In the one-maid family the feeling was that Sunday afternoon had provided a little respite so that the task might be approached with more strength than on any other day of the week.

In the maidless family of today wash day has to be the day that the washwoman can be persuaded to come. And then there is no special advantage in having it on Monday. If you send your washing out then one of the first tasks on Monday ought to be to assemble, sort and count all soiled clothes so that they will be ready to go to the laundry.

There is always quite a bit of stock-taking to be done on Monday morning, and the week is truly begun poorly when you do not inspect your refrigerator and food shelves to see what has been left over from the week-end. Monday's dinner is apt to be decided by the state of the larder after Sunday, and quite frequently the meat for Monday dinner is the roast that has been left on Sunday. There is seldom any advantage in doing general cleaning on Monday, since it is usually desirable to have the house cleaned late in the week before the weekend. Some housewives make a practice of doing quite a bit of cooking, and some baking, on Monday, so as to make the later

Says George Gould Lost
Millions In Transactions

New York, Oct. 4.—Unwarranted speculation by George J. Gould with the funds of the $82,000,000 estate of his father, Jay Gould, of which he was an executor and trustee, resulted in a loss of from $15,000,000 to $30,000,000, it was charged yesterday by Frank B. Walker, of counsel for Frank Jay Gould, who opened in behalf of the objectors in the accounting suit being heard by Referee James A. O'Gorman at the offices of Taylor, Knowles & Hack, 165 Broadway.

A loss to the estate of about $8,000,000 resulted, Mr. Walker said he should attempt to prove, through George's speculative adventures in the stock of the Missouri Pacific Railroad from 1899 to 1914.

George was not only negligent in his administration of the affairs of the estate but absolutely "dishonest," it was asserted by Philip L. Miller, counsel for the children of Anna Gould, now the Duchess of Tallyrand.

The four executors of the estate all were held responsible by Mr. Walker for what he termed the maladministration of its affairs. In addition to the late George, they are his brothers, Edwin, Howard and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, formerly Helen Gould. At the time of Jay Gould's death in 1892, Frank was too young to be legally named as an executor.

It was pointed out yesterday by attorneys for the estate of George Gould that his testimony before trial, upon which Mr. Walker's charges were based, was elicited by unfriendly attorneys and that Mr. Gould died before he could be placed on the witness stand and cross examined by his own lawyers.

EXECUTORS ARE BLAMED

"We are satisfied with the conduct of the executors and trustees for the first four or five years after the death of Jay Gould," began Mr. Walker. "Then we claim that they took a departure from their duties and obligations under the law and made investments for the purpose of clearing up a worse and more scandalous situation."

"The scheme of the will involved still another phase. Under its terms no beneficiary who was also an executor could exercise any power for his or her trust. This provision was constantly violated. In many of the investments losses will be shown in direct disobedience of the explicit provisions of the will."

Mr. Walker, in presenting his documentary evidence, read a letter written to George by Edwin in 1894, in which the latter protested against unsecured loans to the Missouri Pacific by the estate.

"George Gould destroyed his books by fire in 1914, assisted by his son Kingston," Mr. Walker said. "The system he had employed made it possible for him to use the securities of the estate for his own purposes in his own way. Edwin apparently didn't bother himself with how the estate was run."

When Mr. Walker read the testimony of Howard Gould relating to his having given his proxy as trustee to George, Referee O'Gorman observed: "That is very pertinent. He had no right to do that."

"We will show that the witness was mistaken," interrupted Mr. Wallace. "No such power was ever given."

Bonnie Scotland, McBain Riding, Is Winner Of Champion Sweepstakes

Superb Day Pony Leads From The Start In Classic Contest; Fast Times Made On Course; Indiana Makes Sensation

A great crowd thronged the Race Course yesterday, the third day of the autumn meet, and saw Bonnie Scotland, ridden by Mr. McBain, win the Champion Sweepstakes in a race of eight splendid ponies. Borderland was second in the big race, and Zouave third. Messrs. Dallas and Brand, the star riders in this week's meeting, failed to secure a place.

The course was in splendid condition, the early morning rain having had little effect on it, and there was superb racing, with two events finishing in close to record time. The first of these was the Flyaway Cup, in which Capt. Sassoon, on Covellite, made the seven furlongs in 1:45-3/5, the record being 1:45-2/5. The second of these events was the Wayside Cup, in which Mr. Cox's Indians, an outsider, with Mr. O'Brien riding, rode the same distance in 1:45-2/5, and paid the biggest dividend of the day, $125.80. The only other dividend approaching this was Grey Kilt's in the opening race, The Sub-Griffin Scramble of $120.00 for win.

Twenty-one ponies entered in the first race, the Sub-Griffin Scramble, half a mile, in which Grey Kilt sprang a surprise by coming in a winner by three lengths, Mr. Brand riding. At the start Mysub, Heard up, shot off in the lead, and maintained it coming around the bend, but was passed by several ponies as he came into the home stretch; Grey Kilt forging ahead, followed by Larchcroft, Henry the Tallor, and Riverside Boy. Grey Kilt increased his lead to three lengths before reaching the post, Larchcroft with Springfield up coming in second, a length and a half ahead of Henry the Tallor (Davis riding). Grey Kilt paid a handsome dividend for win, $120.00, as well as $24.50 for place.

Capt. Sassoon on Covellite won the second race, the Flyaway Cup, in very fast time, 1:45-3/5 for the seven furlongs, one-fifth second over the record. Eleven ponies started, Diana Ken and Rayfield taking the lead, closely followed by Don Alphonso. This trio maintained their place coming around the bend, but on the home stretch dropped back, Covellite coming to the front followed by Shenkoland and Woodcroft ridden by Dallas and Brand respectively. In a fast and exciting finish the Sassoon pony won by a length and a half over Shenkoland, with Woodcroft another length and a half behind, the rest of the field being quite out of it.

The Grand Stand Stakes was a win for Booran, with Vida up. Ten ponies started in this mile run, and Booran shot ahead right from the start. The Alexander pony maintained its place until the bend, where it was passed for a short time by Pencroft, but coming into the home stretch Booran took the lead again, followed by The Young Bird, Brand riding, and Portland, with Dallas up. The two star jockeys failed to overtake Booran, who won by a length and half, but the pair had a splendid struggle for second, The Young Bird winning by a nose, well ahead of the rest of the field.

the straight Young Grey and Master Robert (Brodie riding) shot out ahead, and there was a splendid race between the five ponies, Young Grey winning by a length and a half over Master Robert, with Englefield another half length behind, and St. Blaise and Critic close up.

The Bubbling Well Cup was won by White Knight, Springfield riding, in one of the best races of the day. Ten ponies started in the mile and a quarter. McKentz, ridden by Crokan, was not inclined to go on to the course at all, but finally decided to make a race of it and get it over with, and shot away fast at the start, maintaining his lead until the bend, with Patafield, Heard riding, and The Kout, Moon up, hanging on to the leader coming down the back straight. At the head the rest of the field came up, and coming into the home stretch White Knight, Roman Oriole (McBain up), and Altai (Vida riding) shot out ahead, and there was a thrilling neck-and-neck finish between White Knight and Roman Oriole, with Altai a length and a half behind. The White pony won by a neck.

Mr. McBain gave notice of his victory in the Champions by winning the seventh race, the Jessfield Cup, on The Nightingale. Seven ponies started in the mile and a quarter. Jack Flint and the Nightingale took the lead, and the Kenjoy pony, Brand riding, forged ahead as they passed the judges' stand, increasing his margin to five or six lengths on the back straight. At the beginning of the bend he fell back somewhat, and The Nightingale, hanging steadily on throughout, overtook him just before coming into the home stretch, which they entered neck and neck, with the Red Bird (Heard) and Diamondland (Harriman), coming forward. The Nightingale took the lead in the straight, and increased it to three lengths before reaching the post, finishing a splendid winner. Diamondland also made a stirring finish on the home stretch, but failed to catch Jack

LEAGUE OF EIGHT FOREIGN BASKET-BALL TEAMS HERE

Ambitious Program For The Coming Winter Season; Meeting Yesterday

At a meeting held yesterday at the Shanghai Rowing Club, called by Mr. Gray, Hon. Secretary, plans were made for the formation of a foreign basket-ball league of eight teams here. Four teams are already assured, these being the Shanghai Rowing Club, the Machine Gunners, the Recreation Club, and the Baseball Club quintets. In addition, a Korean team is applying for admission into the League, a Canadian national team is being formed, the Rowing Club will probably enter a second quintet, and the Public School is also expected to enter.

At yesterday's meeting it was decided that the League games should start December 1, previous to which time a regular schedule will be laid out. This, of course, cannot be done until all entries are in. Teams may enter any time within the next two weeks; the closing date being November 19. A full list of players is required from each team coming into the League.

THE CHAMPION SWEEPSTAKE

Eight ponies started in the Champion Sweepstakes, Bonnie Scotland being ridden by McMain. Brant rode Symphony and Maitland on Zouave and Springfield being on Zouave and Maitland on Borderland. Vida rode New Zealand, Capt. Sassoon Corellite, and White Knight. New Zealand started on the rail.

Bonnie Scotland shot into the lead almost from the start, and increased his margin to about four lengths on the back straight, having a big lead when the front line reached, where the rest began to come up on him, however he kept the leader in the lead, and it was not until the end of the race that he was overtaken by a length.

Also forced to the front was the New Zealand, with a half length lead.

Endless Procession Of Pitchers In Third Game

New York, Oct. 6.—You could see the dust of the marching caravan a mile away. On they came, pitcher after pitcher, and then still more pitchers issuing free passes and base hits until the golden autumn afternoon at the Polo Grounds was littered with the pitchers of every known variety, creed and race. Pitchers came and went in such rapid succession that 50,000 fans sat bewildered at the blurred and kaleidoscopic whirl.

When the dust of the long parade had settled upon the field at dusk, New York had beaten Washington in the third game of the series by the margin of 6 to 4. By this victory New York stepped into the lead by two games to one, before a crowd that filled the polo stadium to the top.

It took eight pitchers two hours and a half to pass a given point before John Watson, the last Giant sharpshooter, sniped Muddy Ruel in the ninth, with two invaders on base, in Washington's desperate effort to tie the score.

Four Giant pitchers yielded nine hits and nine passes throughout the depressing afternoon and four Washington pitchers gave up three passes, eleven hits and a wild pitch in one of the poorest pitched games that ever marked a world series.

Tel, outside of the pitching, the Giants rode to their second victory on twin steeds. One was the charley horse of Roger Peckinpach, Washington's deadliest pinch hitter. The other, need was Frank Frisch, who galloped madly all over the green turf, pulling down hits from the bally air or blocking them along the ground.

FRISCH STARS

Through inning after inning Fordham's meteoric flash was a ball playing centipede as he broke up budding Washington rallies by bounding into outfield territory for fly balls where he twice traveled at such terrific speed that he ran out from under his own cap which fluttered to the ground as Frisch, with his back to the stands, pulled the ball out of the air.

The charley horse in Peckinpach's stout thigh was another great aid to the Giants. A charley horse is a sudden bunching of thigh muscles, due to a sudden strain, leaving in its wake all the ecstatics a toothache transplanted to the leg. This unfortunate episode not only took away Washington's greatest pinch hitter where such chances were numerous all the afternoon, but it also broke up Washington's infield which went to seed in a weedy garden with startling rapidity.

Peck, the veteran, in their infield anchor and when he went away to stable his charley horse in the club house you would never have known the invaders for the team which played so brilliantly the two days before. With the anchor gone the young ship went adrift and finally struck the breakers with a noisy crash. The departure of Peckinpach, who had been the main hero of the first two dramatic games, was a staggering blow from which Washington never recovered despite the effort of four Giant pitchers to pass men around the bases at every given chance.

UNUSUAL PLAYS

This third battle was a ball game of strange and unusual turns. Weird and spotty plays were followed by brilliant exhibitions on the part of Frisch or Sam Rice, the latter on the occasion bounding his flying frame off the right field wall to rob young Lindstrom of a double. Added to this spotty and brilliant combination the next bizarre turn came when the big gathering began to root lustily for Washington at almost every chance.

At least two-thirds of the 50,000 who looked down upon the field were pulling for the triumph of the visiting team which in world series baseball sets a record that has never been touched. There was a tumult of noise when Washington filled the bases in the ninth with only one man out and two runs needed to tie. Here was the spot where the gallant and disabled Beck might have looked like the mint, and when Miller, his substitute, fouled out, the last chance faded.

McGraw called on three pitchers in this last frame. Three hits in a row chased Roy Hill Ryan off the reservation. Jonnard, coming in, walked the first man and forced over a run. This was enough for Jonnard. He was on his way before he knew who opened the gate.

CROWD FOR SENATORS

John Watson followed, but the rally ended when Miller fouled to Lindstrom and Ruel tapped to the same spot. The steady rooting of the crowd for a Washington victory may have worked upon the nerves of McGraw's young men, who seemed to be pitching to a moving plate. They gave nine passes and in the fourth inning McQuillan and Ryan walked four men, which is the height of hospitality.

The New York crowd and the New York pitchers were doing their best for the popular visitors who refused to accept any such courtesies. Their own pitching was just as bad and they had no pinch hitter left to start something at a crucial moment when a base hit might have won the game.

GOSLIN NEAR-HERO

Leon Goslin might have been the day's heroic figure if it hadn't been for the flying feet of Frank Frisch. Goslin earned four hits, and got only one. Frisch threw him out in the first inning. In the fourth inning Frisch dashed out into center field for Goslin's near single and took the ball over his shoulder, running out from under his cap. We have driven a horse at such speed that he ran out from his hair which settled all over our coat, but a human being rarely moves at such a clip.

In the fifth inning Goslin came up again and tried to start another rally. He socked another one toward right center and once more Fordham's pet son turned on full steam and after a long chase hauled the ball down as the cap came off. The last smashing blow that had Goslin mourning like a hen with the pip came in the seventh.

Nemo Mebold had walked, and Rice had singled. This time Goslin decided to keep the ball out of the air and with a full wallop he cracked along the turf toward right field. Here was a hit that was a hit. For just a breath Frisch seemed to start with the swing. He came tearing along and by a last great effort dug the ball up for an out at first. If this sharp blow had gone through Liebold would have scored with Sam Rice on third.

Frisch saved a basketful of runs by his play all afternoon, for Giant pitchers were in a spot where they needed all the support in sight. Buck Harris sent Fred Marberry, his star relief pitcher, to face McQuillan at the kickoff. The tall boy from Streetman, Tex., felt out of place. He is usually called on between the third and sixth innings to save a desperate situation and he was never right. In the second inning he contributed two singles, a wild pitch, and three passes, and yet escaped with only two runs scored when Pen Young struck out with the bases full.

RYAN'S HOMER

After Marberry had come out in the fourth, Russell, Martina and Speece followed in order. Russell arrived just in time to help ring up a new record. He led Bill Ryan a fast ball on the inside in the fourth inning and Ryan slapped it over the fence to be the first National League pitcher that ever hit a world series home run. Jim Bagby of Cleveland hit one off Grimes in 1920 for the American League mark, but Ryan was the first in his own league to lift one out of the park. His home run was a terrific drive into the right field stands. Russell lasted until the seventh when Martina retired the Giants in order. He was relieved by a pinch hitter to make way for Speece, a tall young man with a Carl Mays delivery whose underground ball was raked for three hits and a run.

The Giants got the jump in the second inning when Terry singled, Wilson fanned and Jackson tapped sharply to first. With a double play in sight Harris dropped Bluege's relay and every one was safe.

Here was trouble ahead. The ever reliable Hank Gowdy singled, scoring Terry, and Marberry wild pitched Jackson over the plate. He passed McQuillan, Lindstrom and Frisch, to escape disaster by fanning Young.

The Giants scored again in the third on singles by Kelly and Terry. Washington had its first chance in the second inning. Rice walked and Frisch killed off Goslin's hit. Judge doubled and Bluege walked. With the bases filled, Miller, Peck's substitute in the batting order, filed to Wilson as Rice counted. Ruel walked, filling the bases again, and McQuillan, hearing the call of the wild, left abruptly.

This brought Ryan on, and Ryan responded by passing Tate and forcing Judge over the plate. Liebold came up with the bases still completely stocked and filed to left. What a chance for just one solid blow.

Ryan's home run put the Giants two runs in front and they scored again in the sixth when Miller let Gowdy's tag get away and Lindstrom doubled. They got their last run in the eighth on hits by Jackson, Lindstrom and Frisch.

Washington moved up another peg in the eighth on a hit by Bluege, a pass to Miller and Jackson's error with Shirley up.

CHANCE IN NINTH

Their next great chance came in the ninth. Harris singled and Rice popped out. Goslin singled and Judge singled, filling the bases. A hit meant two runs and a tie. And this is the spot that Peck would have inhabited if his charley horse had not carried him out of battle to the trainer's care. Miller, with a great chance to be a hero, fouled to third.

It was now up to Muddy Ruel, Washington's star catcher, who hadn't made a hit in the series to date. Here was the golden opportunity to climb back to the peak in just one stride. One hit here and all would have been forgotten. But Ruel rapped a bounding chance to Lindstrom who forced Goslin at third. Jonnard came on, after Judge had singled.

He pitched four balls to Bluege, forcing in the run, and when next seen was passing Watson just beyond second base. Watson was coming in and Jonnard was going out. These things happen. It was Watson who suppressed the invaders' dying rally.

PLAY BY INNINGS

First Inning

Senators—Liebold went out, Frisch to Terry. The big crowd gave Harris a cheer. Harris went a long fly to Young. Rice walked. Goslin was thrown out at first by Frisch. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Giants—Lindstrom struck out. Goslin took Frisch's lousy fly. Young got a line single into left field. Kelly was out at first. Harris to Judge. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Inning

Senators—Judge singled sharply over the middle bag. Bluege hit into a double play, McQuillan to Frisch to Terry. Lindstrom took Peckinpach's grounder and threw him out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Giants—Terry singled to right. Wilson fanned. Bluege took Jackson's grounder and threw to Harris, who dropped the ball. Terry scored on Gowdy's single to left. Jackson going to third. Gowdy was out stretching his hit. Goslin to Harris. Jackson scored on a wild pitch by Marberry. McQuillan walked. Lindstrom also walked. Frisch was hit by a pitched ball and the bases were filled. Young fanned. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Third Inning

Senators—Ruel walked. The crowd cheered Marberry. Marberry forced Ruel, McQuillan to Frisch. Liebold tied out to Wilson. Terry made a nice running catch of Harris' foul. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Giants—Miller went to third for Washington and Bluege went to short. Peckinpach's leg was injured. Miller went to third instead of Miller. Kelly got a Texas Leaguer to centre. Terry singled into right. Kelly going to third. Kelly scored when Wilson hit into a double play, Marberry to Bluege to Harris to Judge. Jackson was a victim of strikes. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning

Senators—Rice walked. Frisch made a wonderful catch of Goslin's high fly, racing back to centre field to get it. Judge slashed a hit into left for two bases. Rice going to third. Bluege walked, filling the bases. Rice scored on Miller's sacrifice fly to Wilson. Judge held second. Riel walked. The bases were filled. Tate hit for Marberry. Judge scored when Tate was given a base on balls. The bases were filled. Wilson took Liebold's foul. Two runs, one hit, no errors.

Giants—Russell went into the box for the Senators. Liebold gathered in Gowdy's long drive. Ryan got a home run into the upper right field stand. Rice made a wonderful onehanded catch of Lindstrom's drive, crashing into the concrete stand. Frisch singled over second. Goslin took Young's hoist. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning

Senators—Harris lofted to Kelly, who raced in behind second to make the catch. Frisch threw out Rice. Frisch robbed Goslin of a hit for the second time, going out into right field to take the Goose's scored when Speece threw out Ryan at first. Gowdy going to second. Liebold took Lindstrom's fly and Gowdy went to third. Gowdy was out at the plate when Speece took Frisch's bunt and tossed to Ruel. One run, two hits, no errors.

Sixth Inning

Senators—Judge lined out to Kelly. Bluege was a strike-out victim. Miller scratched an infield hit. Young came in and made a shoestring catch of Ruel's senning safe hit. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Giants—Gowdy's hot smash went through Miller. It was an error for Miller. Ryan sacrificed, Russell to Judge. Gowdy scored on Lindstrom's hit to right for two bases. Miller took Frisch's foul. Harris threw out Young. One run, one hit, one error.

Seventh Inning

Senators—McNeely batting for Russell. McNeely filed out to Wilson. Liebold walked. Harris whiffed. Rice's grounder went for a hit. Liebold went to second. Frisch took Goslin's grounder and threw him out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Giants—Martina went in the box for Washington. Kelly fanned. Ruel took Terry's foul after a long run. Goslin took Wilson's high fly. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Eighth Inning

Senators—Judge went out at first. Terry unsanctified. Bluege shot a single into left. Miller walked. Ruel was thrown out at first. Jackson to Terry. Bluege going to third and Miller to second. Shirley batting for Martina. Bluege scored when Lindstrom fumbled Shirley's grounder. The official scorer gave Shirley a hit. Frisch threw out Liebold. One run, two hits, no errors.

Giants—Speece went in the box for the Senators. Jackson scratched a hit toward third. Gowdy singled into right. Jackson stole second and went to third. Jackson

America's greatest dramatic actor in the most thrilling role of all fiction

John Barrymore
in
SHERLOCK HOLMES

Directed by Albert Parker. Adapted from William Gillette's stage play founded on Sir Conan Doyle's stories

A Picture You Must Not Miss!

At last the world-famous Sherlock Holmes comes to the screen in a brilliant breath-taking drama of London's underworld. It is undeniably the most powerful and sweeping dramatic picture of the year.

The cast includes: Roland Young, Percival Knight, Hedda Hopper, Carol Dempster, Reginald Denny, Robert Schable, Louis Wolheim, Anders Randolph, Von Seyffertitz, William H. Powell and others.

What happens to a girl when her ideals go crashing down? What comes to take their place? What takes place is sad but it is the truth. You'll see it in—

Polo Ponies Sold By Lord Wimbourne After U. S. Match

Sydney, N. S. W., Sept. 18.—Lord Wimbourne, moving spirit of polo in England and angel for the British polo team which played in the international matches at Meadowbrook, today definitely severed his connection with polo forever.

His twelve polo ponies were sold at auction at East Winstead, L. I. Two of his horses—Queen, a chestnut mare, and Fairy Story, a bay mare, brought the highest prices of the day's offerings. They brought $10,000 apiece and were purchased by Stephano Sanford, well-known polo player of the famous John Sanford family.

At the same time Will Rogers bought Jackinto, one of the ponies of the Prince of Wales, a chestnut gelding, for $3,100, a gift for Patricia Ziegfeld, daughter of Florence Ziegfeld and Billy Burke.

Razor, Barber up, Wins By A Whisker

Bath, Eng., Sept. 20.—Razor, with T. O. Barber up, won a hair-raising race this afternoon at the racetrack here by a close shave, noting out Polyanna by hardly more than a hair's breadth.

SPORTING PINK OF "CHINA PRESS" TO APPEAR ALL WEEK

Special Sports Supplement To Continue Until End Of Race Week

The Sporting Pink of THE CHINA PRESS, the daily appearance of which following the race days this week has been favorably commented upon in many quarters, is to be continued as a daily feature until the end of the present week. The full story of the world's series games, which has been held up somewhat on account of pressure of local sporting events, will be concluded by the end of Race Week.

Chinese Soccer Team Returns From New Zealand Tour

The Chinese Soccer Team, which toured New Zealand recently, is expected to arrive in Shanghai tomorrow by the President Wilson, according to a telegram received by Dr. Gray of the Y.M.C.A. here. The team left Shanghai in the middle of last June and made a tour of New Zealand, playing more than twenty games, having a successful season.

light-weight who is said to be very good goods. Whether Nevsky will be matched here again depends on this fight. It depends less upon whether the Russian wins than upon whether he fights. If he fights he can be sure of another chance, win or lose, but if he wrestle and mauls as he has done in his last two exhibitions no one will want to see him in the ring here again.

Consolation Sweep At Carlton Tonight

There is no need for the multitude of local sports who didn't win the Champion Sweepstakes to be disheartened about it, for they still have a chance, and tonight the unsuccessful Champion tickets may cheer the holders by winning one of the prizes at the Carlton, where another big event takes place in the drawing of the "Carlton Consolation Contest."

All you have to do is take your tickets along with you, place them in the barrel, and enjoy the thrill of being a lucky ticket-holder. Write your name and address legibly on the back of each ticket.
